House Unit Votes Aid For Schools Around D. C.

Construction Measure Has Provisions For Retroactive Payment of Funds

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House Labor Committee yesterday approved a measure to aid school construction in communities where school rolls are swollen by an influx of Federal workers.

The authorization measure, which may call for an estimated 150 million dollars in Federal expenditures, will affect virtually all the nearby Virginia and Maryland areas housing large numbers of Federal workers.

The District of Columbia itself will not be affected since that is taken care of by separate Federal legislation.

If Congress adopts the authorization measure, a separate appropriation bill will be considered later.

Only Likely Measures

Members of the House Labor Committee said there is little, if any, opposition to the bill. They believe this measure, and its companion bill, a 35-million-dollar act to aid in the maintenance and operation of schools in the so-called 600 "critical areas," are the only education measures likely to be passed for the duration of the war emergency.

The bill contains a retroactive provision by which reimbursement from Federal funds can be made to those communities which have already expended local funds to construct school buildings because of the school rolls increased by reason of activities of the Federal Government.

Presumably Arlington County, therefore, would be eligible for such reimbursement.

Representative Thomas H. Burke (D., Ohio), a member of the committee, said it was already obvious from the announcements of increased military and civilian government personnel in Washington that this school aid will be necessary in the Washington area.

Those nearby communities affected by the companion bill for school maintenance are Alexandria and Falls Church and the

D. C.-to-Tampa Train Derailed At Wake Forest

Raleigh, N. C., July 28 (U.P.).—Four cars of a Washington-to-Tampa Seaboard passenger train derailed tonight at Wake Forest, N. C., but Seaboard officials here said they had received no reports of serious injuries.

Officials said three coaches and a diner of the "Sunland" derailed as the train pulled into a siding. The accident occurred at approximately 9 p. m.

Railroad officers left Raleigh immediately for the scene of the derailment. A wrecker was dispatched to begin clearing the tracks as another passenger and several freight trains waited for the way to be cleared.

Pepco Seeks $3½ Million Rate Boost

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

The Potomac Electric Power Co. asked the District Public Utilities Commission yesterday for a rate increase that would add 15 cents to the monthly electricity bill of the average District residential consumer.

The company simultaneously filed for increases with the Maryland Public Service Commission and the Virginia State Corporation Commission. It asked that all three increases be made effective September 20.

The requested increases would bring in an additional 3½ million dollars a year from all of its 268,046 customers, Pepco estimated in the petition filed with the PUC.

The average increase throughout the system would be 9½ percent. But it would not be distributed equally. The average increase for all residential users would be 4.3 percent. The increase to residential users in the District would be less than that because of higher suburban rates in Maryland and Virginia.

Residents in the District now pay $3.50 for 142 kilowatt hours.

Troops Called To Curb Riots In Belgium

Compromise Hinted In Effort to Satisfy Leopold's Opponents

Brussels, July 28 (AP).—Rioting anti-Leopoldists today attacked streetcars, taxis and stores operating in defiance of a strike call in Belgium's capital. Then the government called troops for the first time in two days to keep disorders from getting further out of hand.

Opponents of King Leopold III, who returned from exile Saturday, have resorted to violence to support the strike called in an attempt to force the king's abdication. Premier Jean Duvieusart warned over the radio the government would take energetic measures to protect vital installations. Within an hour, troops started occupying Brussels' main telephone building.

In his radio message, the premier called for an end to threats and violence and hinted a compromise to satisfy Leopold's opponents might be considered. Speaking after an audience with the king, he said Leopold wanted to consult leaders of all opinions.

An unconfirmed report said troops also were being brought from their occupation sector in the British zone of Germany. Government officials declined to comment.

Throughout the afternoon windows were smashed, smoke and stink bombs were hurled, police whistles shrilled and ambulance bells clanged. The violence was a follow-up to the battle anti-Leopoldists staged last night with police guarding the king at Laeken Palace.

Socialist leaders of the king's opponents have threatened political and industrial chaos until Leopold steps down from the throne.

The pro-Leopold cabinet of Social Christian (Catholic) Party members announced tonight it had taken "a certain number of measures" to maintain public order and freedom to work. The nature of these measures was not disclosed.

Truman Acts To Hasten Stockpiling

Asks Funds to Buy Rubber, Aluminum, Reopen Factories, Reactivate Ships

President Truman moved yesterday to speed the build-up of supplies of critical materials such as aluminum and rubber, and to take more merchant ships out of the mothball fleet.

He asked Congress for 600 million dollars to expand the Nation's stockpile of strategic materials, and 18 million dollars to activate merchant ships in the reserve list.

The larger sum includes an estimate of six million dollars for reopening aluminum plants.

Dr. John R. Steelman, the assistant to the President, called on the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to increase Government production of synthetic rubber to a rate of approximately 675,000 tons a year. This would be done by reactivating producing plants.

Means 100,000-Ton Increase

This was the second such move since fighting began in Korea. The RFC was directed to reopen some plants on July 7. Taking these into account, the prospective annual production of synthetic rubber was about 575,000 tons a year; therefore yesterday's order would represent a further increase of about 100,000 tons a year.

The White House, in announcing President Truman had asked Congress for additional funds for stockpiling and for reactivating merchant ships, said:

"Under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, the Maritime Administration is responsible for the maintenance and preservation of a national defense reserve fleet. The 18-million-dollar request is for funds to make repairs to, and activate as necessary, a portion of the high priority vessels in the reserve fleet. The vessels covered by this program would be among the first required for emergency sea transportation. The ships to be repaired and activated will be designated by the Secretary of Defense.

In Addition to 83 Ships

"The Maritime Administration has already received requests from the Department of Defense for the activation of 83 ships in the reserve fleet. Because of the urgency in making these vessels immediately available, the estimate contemplates that the costs of repair and

Several Inactive Naval Reservists Called Up 'Daily'

"Several" Naval Reservists in the area have been recalled during this week to active duty on an involuntary basis, a spokesman for the Potomac River Naval Command said yesterday.

The Reservists, who are being called up "daily," include both officers and enlisted men, he said. While most of those ordered up have been members of the Organized Reserve, some have been inactive Reservists.

There was no indication of the number called. There are about 17,500 Reservists in the PRNC area, 2300 of them in seven Organized Reserve divisions. The figures do not include air Reservists.

The PRNC area includes the District, five nearby Maryland counties, six Virginia counties and Alexandria.

Pentagon Disavows Pessimism

Won't Be Thrown Off Peninsula Despite Setbacks, Spokesman Avers

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A high-ranking Army spokesman declared yesterday that "there is no reason for pessimism" over the course of the fighting in Korea.

Declaring his assessment of the situation was based on late reports from General MacArthur's headquarters, the official assured reporters:

"We are not going to be thrown off the peninsula."

But the spokesman conceded there may be further American pushbacks from the present line and agreed the next week or two may be crucial.

Some other military men here were not quite as optimistic—viewing the prospects of holding on no more than 50-50. They pointed to the fact that pressure is being applied over almost all of the front and noted that near the south coast the Reds have almost entirely crossed the mountain range to reach Hadong. While this thrust is not in as great force as in the center, badly needed reserves undoubtedly have to be committed to meet it.

It is believed, however, that some additional reinforcements have arrived in Korea and are available to stiffen the shortened defense line. Parts of two other divisions—the First Marines and the Second Infantry—should be nearing Korea.

Meanwhile there were these developments here in the defense expansion program:

1. Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee announced, after hearing testimony behind closed doors from top military chiefs, that the Army will expand as rapidly as possible to 834,000 officers and men before next June 30 at the latest.

2. This 240,000-man increase, military observers predicted, makes it almost certain there will be another draft call this year. While it is hoped the inductions will stimulate voluntary enlistments, it is unlikely that Reserve calls will come anywhere near such totals as the Army needs.

The Army already has asked for 50,000 inductees in September and another 50,000 in October.

3. Of the $3,059,154,000 proposed for the Army in the 10.5 billion dollar supplemental defense budget, some 54 percent or $1,651,000,000 will be spent for tanks, guns and other weapons and equipment.

Emphasis in tanks will be on the 47-ton medium General Patton—by modernization of existing Pershings—and the new 28-ton T-41

Baruch Plan Seen Gaining In the Senate

Close Vote Likely On Across-the-Board Price and Wage Curbs

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A strong tide of sentiment for the Baruch plan of across-the-board price, wage and rationing controls spread to the Senate yesterday with so much momentum that a close vote on the issue seemed assured.

Bernard M. Baruch, 79-year-old architect of the plan, encouraged the movement with a new statement urging addition of the plan, on a standby basis, to the President's more limited controls.

"This is absolutely essential if we are not to be eaten up by further inflation in the form of further price rises," said the Democratic elder statesman and adviser to Presidents in two world wars.

The new Baruch statement was made public by Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) as his Senate Banking Committee took a weekend recess to permit "more study" of the Baruch proposals.

"The very least that should be done is to amend the bill before you include power to control any or all prices and to give the President authority to ration scarce essentials to civilians when and if that becomes necessary," Baruch wrote Maybank.

Instead of rolling prices back

Fantastic Capture

Koreans Swarm Over Red Tank And Take It With a Pistol Shot

By Marguerite Higgins
NYHT News Service

With South Korean Forces at the Front, July 28.—The crew of a vaunted Soviet T-34 tank was captured here today and turned out to be five filthy frightened former farmers, carpenters and miners who completely failed to live up to the rapidly growing South Korean legend depicting them as fanatics and supermen.

Looking like the survivors of a mine disaster, the prisoners were persuaded to surrender by a promise of good treatment.

This Soviet T-34, a medium 35-ton vehicle, was the spearhead of last night's Communist attack on the South Korean 6th Division on the central front. The tank is being brought in, piece by piece, for thorough examination by American experts.

With bloody, blackened faces and bodies, the tank men said: "We had to go to war or we would have been killed by the Communists."

They asserted they had never been told the United States was in the war and frankly admitted they

Chiang's Losses Put at 8 Million By China Reds

San Francisco, July 28 (AP).—Chinese Communist Army headquarters said today the Chinese Nationalists lost more than eight million troops in the last four years.

The Red Army listed its own losses for the four years at 1,522,500.

The Reds said they captured 54,430 Nationalist artillery pieces, 419,958 machine guns and more than three million rifles and pistols in four years of fighting.

San Diego, Calif., July 28 (U.P.).—A sharp earthquake shook San Diego today, rattling windows, but no damage was reported. The Imperial Valley felt several earthquakes yesterday.

Extra Juries Planned for Security Cases

Extra Federal grand juries will be held in readiness here henceforth to handle cases affecting the National security or defense program, it was announced yesterday.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said that the special juries will be kept to give priority to all criminal matters in the "internal security and defense fields."

He gave no indication as to what cases will be presented, nor did United States Attorney George Morris Fay, in charge of prosecutions locally.

McGrath said the two grand juries now empanelled here will not be dismissed for the present, that another will be formed on September 1, and a fourth may be organized a month later.

Meanwhile, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover called on citizens to report "facts" they receive about subversive activities. But he cautioned against malicious gossip and idle rumors.

Normally, Hoover's office would investigate subversion cases which occur in Washington and which would go to the grand juries here.

Fay gave some details as to the new grand jury setup.

He said that starting October 1, one grand jury will sit each morning on local routine cases and a second on similar cases during the afternoon.

A third grand jury will be kept on immediate call for any cases of espionage or subversive activities. And, if necessary, more grand juries will be kept available.

Foe's 90,000 Troops Fail To Throw Allies Back

BULLETIN

Tokyo, (Saturday), July, 29 (AP).—Fresh American troops from Okinawa have been sent to Korea to stop the Communists' sweeping flanking movement along the southern coast, it was learned today. The reinforcements moved secretly to South Korea directly from Okinawa, the big American air base island in the Ryukyus. They soon went into action.

By Don Huth

Tokyo (Saturday), July 29 (AP).—A slashing United States counterattack has hurled back the great Red push in the center of the blazing Korean war front, a field dispatch said today.

The dispatch said the counterattack regained positions lost during a night of furious fighting. The Americans had been thrown back in a supreme Communist bid to conquer the last one-third of southeast Korea.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead in a dispatch at 1:25 a. m. (7:25 p. m., Friday, Eastern Daylight Time) declared the line now was stabilized.

He presumably referred to the critical Hwanggan sector 95 miles northwest of the American supply port of Pusan.

Divisions Restore Positions

The latest information at United States Eighth Army Headquarters in Korea said both the United States First Cavalry and the Twenty-fifth Divisions had restored the positions they held when the big push by an estimated 90,000 Reds began yesterday.

This word came from Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson.

Whitehead said the first American counterattack by both divisions had checked the Communists Friday after some ground was lost. A second counterblow today smashed the Reds back to their original positions.

An Eighth Army communique released at 12:30 p. m. (10:30 p. m. Friday, EDT) said Communist forces continued to exert pressure combined with "some local attacks, but no large-scale assault or penetration" was reported along the entire war front.

The left flank of the Twenty-fifth Division north of the main Yongdong-Taegu highway received heavy Red pressure throughout Friday and again at dawn today, the communique said.

Two companies were overrun Friday, but the "line was reestablished without loss of ground." The Twenty-fourth Regiment advanced 2000 yards in their area

Additional Tanks Reaching Korea To Guard Flanks

Tokyo, July 28 (U.P.).—A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today that the American troops on the Korean front could look forward to the end of the North Korean encirclement tactics.

Enough armor is now becoming available to the American Army to permit the dispatch of tanks to the front in sufficient number to protect advance units, the spokesman said.

On the central front, the spokesman said, the Communists have the Allied forces outnumbered still by four to one in manpower.

But the Allies now have stronger relative fire power, he said, and especially are blasting the North Koreans with artillery, including variable air bursts.

Civil Service Stops Discharges Of Non-Status U. S. Workers

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The thousands of non-status Federal workers who have at least two years of civilian Government service hit the jackpot yesterday. This is how:

1. Civil Service issued an order to cancel their firings; and,

2. It will ask the President to issue an order to cover them into permanent Civil Service jobs.

More than 50,000 employes of whom an estimated 8000 are in and near this city will be benefited by the program which was dictated by the new and big expansion of Government services due to the Korean crisis.

Temporary employes with less than two years of service are still subject to Civil Service's firing orders. Nevertheless, only a minor number of the estimated 75,000 will be fired, officials say, because Civil Service will have its hands full recruiting for the defense agencies. Eventually, many of them may be covered into jobs with full status.

The order cancelling the firings of many war service and temporary employes was sent out yesterday to all agency personnel officers by W. A. McCoy, chief of Civil Service's examining staff. In it he said in part:

"Agencies should take immediate steps to cancel terminations of employes which were ordered in compliance with displacement orders issued by the Civil Service Commission, provided the employes had at least two years of continuous civilian service as of July 28, 1950."

The war service system was used by Civil Service during World War II in order to give veterans a chance to compete for Federal jobs. It ended in 1946 when the commission began to convert to peacetime operations of examining and selecting employes. During that interim period, temporary appointments were made.

As lists of eligibles were set up from competitive tests, the war service and temporary people were gradually "displaced" and persons who passed the exams were given the jobs. Many non-status employes, of course, were given the jobs in the process that covered more than a million Federal jobs. The commission just about had the Government service back to a peacetime basis, personnel-wise, when the Korean war broke out.

Within a period of a few weeks the commission has had to reverse its policy of firing employes to concentrate on recruiting new people. Furthermore, it can wipe the slate clean on war service people by having the President issue an order to make those remaining eligible for full Civil Service status.

Two Others Shifted

Edward J. Kelly Is Promoted To Top Capital Parks Position

Interior Secretary Oscar L. Chapman yesterday promoted Edward J. Kelly to the job of superintendent of the National Capital Parks and created the position of community planner for Irving C. Root, whom Kelly succeeds.

Harry T. Thompson, assistant superintendent of local parks since 1945, was named associate superintendent in the move.

Chapman said Kelly's promotion does not involve "any change whatsoever" in the Interior Department's policy against segreation of recreation facilities here. He said the change "can't by the record be considered other than as a promotion" for the three men.

Kelly was designated to represent the Interior Department on the D. C. Recreation Board last April. It was understood Root had misgivings about the department's announced intention to open its six swimming pools here on a non-segregated basis. Sources close to Interior also felt that Kelly would be more vocal in his support of Interior's policy than was Root.

Root said yesterday he was completely satisfied with his new post. He said he was a city planner, and would be getting back into his own field. In his new position, he will advise the Director of the National Park Service and the Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation on the technical phases of town site planning, zoning, and building code preparation on reclamation projects in the Rocky Mountains and Pacific Coast areas.

The Gallup Poll

Little Chance of Ending War Seen in Less Than Six Months

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 28.—The average American sees no termination of the Korean war for at least six months. But he does not anticipate a long war.

Only 14 percent think the war will last more than a year.

While the man in the street is no expert on military affairs, his views on the length of the war may have considerable bearing on his attitude toward mobilization, defense planning, government spending and the like.

Surveys in the early days of World War II showed a general public tendency to underestimate the length of the war.

In today's study this question was put to a balanced cross-section of U. S. voters:

"Just your best guess, about how much longer do you think the war in Korea will last?"

Here is the vote:

One month or less	4%
About one to six months	19
Six months	18
Between six months and one year	26
More than a year	14
Depends on circumstances	4
No opinion	15
	100%

Interviewing for this survey was done primarily in the week of July 10-15. Subsequent reverses or successes in Korea would tend to respectively lengthen or shorten the people's estimate.

The survey found no significant differences by education level in the estimates of the length of war.

Korean Boy Leads Yanks to Own Lines

With the United States First Cavalry, July 27 (U.P.).—A proud 10-year-old South Korean boy came into the American lines last night with nearly 200 weary American troops trudging behind him.

"Jimmy" ran into the GIs deep in enemy territory where they had been cut off.

"He picked us up on the last day and warned us away from enemy patrols by tipping us on the right thing to do," Lieut. John Rousche, jr., Harrisburg, Pa., said. "I'm going to take him back to Japan with me if and when I get back."

Meantime, the boy has been appointed mascot of the unit.

John W. Jackson (rank lost in transmission from front) of Richlands, Va., his face gray with exhauston, told how he and his buddies tried twice to get through an enemy road block but could not make it.

They finally headed south and dodged mortar, machine gun and rifle fire "plus almost continuous sniper fire."

On Wednesday the band surprised some North Koreans in a town south of Yongdong.

"Here we did ourselves some good—we got plenty of them," Jackson said.

The road became so narrow that the armor could not pass and the crews blew up their tanks.

"We hadn't had anything to eat since the night before and we like to have starved," said Jackson.

"We kept climbing mountains and down gullies. The people were friendly but sometimes we had to get tough to get litter bearers for our wounded. The worst part was that we had no water for a day and a half.

"About the middle of the second day we got the biggest thrill—we were spotted by L-5 planes and later five of them came over and dropped food and medicine and blood plasma."

Then the GIs met "Jimmy," and he led them to safety. But in their last break for the American lines they came under fire of American artillery.

Counterattack Stops Reds

but later "consolidated their positions slightly to the rear to avoid creating a salient in the line."

"Some enemy activities" were reported on the front and right flanks of the First Cavalry Division in the vicinity of Yongdong.

The communique reported that a Cavalry battalion made an attack on its right, presumably Friday, to relieve pressure against the left flank of the Twenty-fifth Division and "help stabilize the situation."

Men of two United States companies, which were cut off, have returned to American lines, but a third group remains surrounded. It is being supplied by air with ammunition and food.

Concentrations of Red troops are reported in the southwest where the Fourth Communist division is making a wide drive along the southern front. The situation there remains fluid.

Red Column Enters Kochang

Air observers said that a Red column had pushed into the communications center of Kochang, 38 miles south of the Hwanggan sector and 75 miles west of Pusan.

These observers said at least seven tanks were in the Red column, which was brought under aerial attack. One Red tank was left burning in the town.

One South Korean unit seized Chobong, northwest of Hamchang, after an attack. Farther east around Yechon, one south Korean unit was driven back 1000 yards but lost ground was regained in a successful counterattack by another republican force.

Red forces still hold Yongdok on the east area. The Twenty-third South Korean regiment holding favorable terrain south of the town has resisted all Red efforts to dislodge it.

Attack Grinds to Halt

The Communist push—described by a headquarters spokesman yesterday as the biggest yet—appeared to have ground to a halt, at least temporarily.

The South Koreans northeast of Hwanggan were reported fighting well.

The Army communique said the southern unit attacked and seized Chobong, northwest of Hamchang or about 28 miles northeast of Hwanggan.

Sixteen miles northeast of Hamchang, a South Korean counterattack erased a dent of more than half a mile in the line.

The main weight of attack by nine North Korean divisions still was being exerted on the American sector of the front around Hwanggan, where heavy Red attacks were launched yesterday.

The North Koreans had driven into the hinge of the foot cavalry and Twenty-fifth positions.

Lines Are Straightened

Whitehead reported from an advance command post that elements of the two American divisions cleaned out the Red infantry in the gap and straightened the Allied defenses to the original line.

Skies cleared at dawn Saturday, promising heavier United States air support. Rains and clouds had held down air support during the early stages of the new Red offensive launched in the supreme effort to throw American troops into the sea before reinforcements en route can join the battle.

Navy planes broke through the low ceiling Friday and skip-bombed a railway tunnel entrance southeast of Wyongdong where North Koreans were believed to have set up a command post.

Air observers reported enemy troops of estimated division strength had moved south of United States positions on the western part of the line, apparently to start a flanking attack.

Two American divisions and their South Korean Allies stood up to the supreme test of fire and steel thrown out by nine Red divisions.

General MacArthur's headquarters said a "savage fire fight" was going on northeast of Yongdong.

There, as elsewhere on the defensive front manned by the foot cavalry, the Twenty-fifth Tropic Lightning Division and South Koreans, probably the most important decision of the five-week-old Korean war is being rendered.

Rain and low ceilings hampered air support for the defending allied forces after a clear midweek period when the planes hammered with rockets and bombs on the growing Red offensive concentrations.

The North Koreans kicked off Friday in predawn darkness. Their tank-led charges followed up incessant overnight Red artillery barrages that have continued thundering day and night against American big-gun fire.

The artillery preliminary and observations of enemy concentrations had left no doubt that "this is it." The Americans and South Koreans were as ready as they could be against greatly outnumbering armored forces.

A veteran officer said he never saw an artillery barrage in Normandy or the Battle of the Bulge like this one of the Reds.

Concentrated Near Yongdong

General MacArthur's headquarters summary issued at 12:30 a. m. Saturday (10:30 a. m., Friday, EDT) said the Reds were concentrating their heaviest fire and manpower on the central front around recently abandoned Yongdong, some 90 miles northeast of the vital allied supply port of Pusan on Korea's southeastern tip.

Flanking attacks were being thrown southeast and northeast of Yongdong against American forces astride the rail and road lines to Pusan, leading from Yongdong through Kumchon, 30 air miles to the American rear.

The three North Korean divisions in the center and on the immediate flanks apparently were the blooded Second and Third Divisions and the battle-tried First.

In the preliminaries these divisions speared out with tanks and masses of manpower to hit the defense line on the nose and with left and right hooks.

A headquarters spokesman said late Friday night that the Communists are making their biggest try to shove the American United Nations forces off the peninsula before help can arrive and before the Reds lose their momentum through lack of supplies and reserve manpower.

light tank, even though all the bugs are not yet out of this highly promising weapon, it is understood. Large quantities of "Skysweeper" antiaircraft guns also are on the buying list, members of the House committee said.

4. The Navy disclosed plans to recruit 70,000 skilled construction workers into new Reserve Seabee battalions. Those enlisted would be held in a standby reserve status for a full-scale emergency. Only older men above draft age—26 through 44—who have required skills are wanted and will be given petty officer ratings. Former Seabees up to 50½ are acceptable, it was said.

(5) The Air Force announced it would order some WAF reserves to active duty—the first service to bring in individual women reserves involuntarily. Some, however, have been ordered up as part of Marine organized reserve units.

USAF spokesmen said they needed WAFs (Women of the Air Force) who are skilled in communications, electronics, photograph, weather analysis, instrument maintenance, automotive equipment, food service, transportation, supply, administration, security and law enforcement and the medical and dental services.

(6) In another mobilization move, the Air Force announced it will recall 50 Reserve chaplains involuntarily. Those to be ordered are captains and first lieutenants under 42. At the same time, Maj. Gen. Charles I. Carpenter, chief USAF Chaplain, asked the nation's churches to help them recruit 300 young clergymen as standby reservists.

(7) The Senate approved the 13.3 billion dollar regular defense budget, by voice vote and almost without change. It is a part of the "one-package" appropriation bill still before the Senate.

In repeating General MacArthur's earlier statement that there is "no question of ultimate victory" in Korea, the Army spokesman was answering a reporter's question as to why high Pentagon chiefs were optimistic while the man-in-the-street seems pessimistic.

"Our optimism reflects that of General MacArthur, who is there on the spot," he said. "I think the tendency of the man-in-the-street is to read the headlines about giving ground and losing towns and think that the situation is dangerous.

"It is unfortunate but not dangerous. The whole plan of the campaign has been a holding, a delaying action. It would be poor strategy to get stubborn and try to hold until decimated.

"All these actions show that our lines are stiffening and our soldiers are learning how to handle themselves and how to handle refugees and Red infiltrating tactics. The whole picture in my opinion is encouraging, even though we are being forced to give ground."

Trespassers at Alaska Fort Face Shooting

Anchorage, Alaska, July 28 (AP). Security guards at Fort Richardson have orders to shoot if necessary to halt trespassers found wandering in restricted areas, Post Commander Brig. Gen. Donald R. Hutchinson said today.

Hutchison reported several instances recently where unidentified persons have been seen fleeing into the woods near aircraft dispersal units when challenged by guards.

Meanwhile, military leaders said that next to the security problem, their biggest fear is of the effect the strike of the AFL plumbers union will have on the region's military construction.

Crack Turkish Units Alerted for Korea

Istanbul, Turkey, July 28 (U.P.).—Units of the crack Twenty-eighth Turkish division were reported unofficially today to have been picked for the 4500-man Turkish force for the Korean war.

The designated units, all trained in American methods under the United States military aid program, have been alerted and are awaiting United Nations orders to sail for Korea, the reports said.

Preinduction Calls in Draft To Be Doubled

District draft boards will step up the number of men to be ordered to preinduction physical and mental examinations in August to twice the current rate, it was announced yesterday.

At present, an average of 50 men is being sent to the Arlington Farms preinduction center every Monday, Wednesday and Friday for the tests.

Beginning August 7, about 100 will be ordered to the examinations on each of those days in order to meet the new District quota of 252 men requested by the Army for September, it was explained by Frank P. Norton, deputy Selective Service director for the District.

Rate to Continue

As the quota is expected to be the same for October, the higher rate of preinduction exams will probably be continued in September, he said. The August draft quota is 101 for the District.

Yesterday, 44 District men showed up for the tests at Arlington Farms. Fifty-three were ordered to report on Monday and Wednesday, 21 failed to appear for tests. Most of these had failed to notify their local boards of changes of address.

The draft official urged men who ordinarily wear glasses to bring them to the preinduction exams. Without them, draft candidates have to be supplied from a stock of Army lenses and the tests are slowed up considerably.

20 Are Accepted

Meanwhile, the Army accepted 18 recruits and the Air Force two, out of 37 applying at the joint Army-Air Force recruiting station.

The Navy tentatively accepted nine of 14 applicants for the regular service, turned down one Wave applicant and swore in 13 recruits, one a musician. Four enlisted reservists were accepted for active service.

At the Marine recruiting station, three men were accepted out of 17 applicants. Four recruits were sworn in and sent to boot camp and one recruit for the Marine Band was also sworn in. Another was assigned to duty with the Fifth Infantry Battalion.

Time to Build Forces Has Come, Shinwell Says

Windmill Hill, England, July 28 (U.P.).—Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell said today the time had come for Britain to "stop talking" and to build up its army, navy and air force to face the "dread possibilities" ahead.

Shinwell said Britain required "a great many men" to meet potential aggression. His speech underscored the government's determination to place the nation on a wartime footing.

Meanwhile, Parliament adjourned with the Labor government assured of staying in power until it reconvenes October 17, provided World War III does not begin.

Floundering Red Tank Captured With a Pistol

and their fellow tankmen were terribly afraid of airpower and artillery. With suspicious unanimity the captured men all professed to be non-Communists.

One was a native of Manchuria and said he received his training in that Chinese region.

The men professed to have had only three months' training in tank warfare.

The T-34 tank was captured in a fantastic series of incidents. It was leading a column of ten assaulting South Korean positions. It first ran into a mined bridge and was forced to back up.

South Korean infantrymen made up their own brand of "Molotov cocktail" to harass the tank. The "cocktail" consisted mainly of grenades and dynamite wrapped in a package. Hurling this at the tank, the South Koreans managed to jolt it, but it remained operational.

They brought up a 57-mm. antitank gun and a light-type bazooka and let the tank have several bursts. These bounced off the tank, but disconcerted the crewmen sufficiently to cause them to back the tank into a rice field, where it seemed to flounder.

Seeing the tank in an unmaneuverable position, the South Korean infantryment swarmed all over it, pounded on the turret and told the tankmen to come out.

The North Koreans started swinging the tank's guns wildly about. Hopping over the swinging guns a South Korean officer finally found a hole in the turret and fired through it with his pistol. Then he put his hand through the hole and made a gesture of handshaking while shouting down that the tankmen would be well treated if they came out. Scared and battered, the North Koreans emerged.

From a technical standpoint, one of the most interesting—and as yet unverified—points made by the tankmen was that the T-34 cannot swing its big guns to the side unless it is standing still.

The captured crewmen said they had not eaten in two days and they looked it. They were thin to the point of emaciation and appeared completely without spirit.

Telling of their fear of planes, the crewmen divulged that when fighter planes appeared in the sky they would head for the nearest village and drive their tanks straight through the walls of flimsy Korean houses, bringing the thatched roofs down on top of them so as to provide almost perfect camouflage.

This is why American jets have recently been assigned to burn down entire villages in areas where enemy tanks are operating.

Red Naval Transport Sighted Off Japan

Tokyo, July 28 (AP).—A Japanese district patrol boat reported today it sighted a Russian naval transport sailing between two of the main islands of Japan.

The patrol boat said the Soviet craft, of about 5000 tons, was at the western entrance of Tsugaru Strait, between Honshu and Hokkaido Islands and was flying a Soviet flag.

The patrol boat said it came within 55 yards of the gray painted vessel.

Arlington Man Lost In Crash

James W. Welsh, 26, of Arlington, an American Red Cross information officer, yesterday was reported missing in the sea crash of a C-47 Army courier plane 80 miles south of Tokyo Wednesday.

Welsh

Welsh, who lived at 3373 S. Stafford st., Arlington, until he went to Tokyo for the Red Cross last January, was on his way to Korea.

His wife, Virginia May Welsh, and their 2-year-old daughter, Sherry Ann, joined him in Tokyo in June, traveling on the last boat to take women and children to the area.

Wreckage Found

The Red Cross yesterday was notified by the Army adjutant General in Tokyo that Welsh was on the plane, and that the wreckage had been found by Japanese fishermen. One unidentified survivor has been spotted by rescue planes.

A Navy lieutenant in World War II and a former newspaperman in Fort Worth, Tex., Welsh was a free-lance writer and student here after his discharge from the service in November, 1945, until he joined the Red Cross a month before going to Tokyo. He graduated from George Washington University last year.

For a time, he was associate editor of the Naval Aviation News here. He also wrote two books on training procedures for the Navy and wrote several articles for Our Navy magazine.

Once Reported Missing

In the Navy, he served as operations officer in an air support unit in the Pacific. At one time he was reported missing in action while serving as a forward observer for Navy planes supporting an Army attack during one of the island campaigns.

Welsh attended Texas Christian University for a short time, and was a reporter on the Fort Worth Star-Telegram before entering naval service in August, 1942.

An aunt, Mrs. Truman Boyles, lives at 205 Washington rd., Alexandria. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Wyley A. Welsh of Fort Worth.

Lake Success, July 28 (NYHT). A new Soviet "peace" call in Korea was the leading expectation here today of United Nations Security Council delegates, as the Council's majority conferred privately on the latest Soviet maneuver which will bring back Deputy Foreign Minister Yakov A. Malik, as Council president, next Tuesday, after a 28-week Soviet boycott.

A half-dozen nations, in a one-hour Council session this morning, indorsed the report of the United States military command on the U. N. fighting in Korea. India, one of the six, voiced a new appeal to the North Korean Communists to end their invasion and to withdraw behind the Thirty-Eighth Parallel in accordance with the first Korean cease-fire resolution of the Council voted June 25.

The Council, boycotted for the seventh time by Malik, then slated another meeting for 11 a.m. next Monday, the day before Malik's scheduled return, possibly to take up a plan for economic and social relief for Korea. This afternoon, majority delegates met in the Empire State Building office of Arne Sunde, of Norway, July president of the council, to exchange ideas on the Soviet move.

Topic Kept Secret

At the Soviet delegation, it was reported Malik might send in a notice during the day of the topic he proposes to take up Tuesday. A delegation spokesman refused to disclose what that might be, but said: "It will all be clear in the necessary time."

However, the Lake Success consensus tended toward a belief the Soviets decided they had made a mistake to let the Council go ahead during the last four and a half weeks to rally 52 non-Communist nations against the North Korean aggression. In this view the Soviets would now come back in an effort to win over as much support as possible.

The trend in delegates' speculations favored the suggestion that the Russians would call for a new cease-fire in Korea, and for council mediation under conditions that would attempt to oust U. N. fighting forces and the South Korean regime of President Syngman Rhee.

It was considered more doubtful that the Russians would make any all-out-effort to seat the Chinese Communists, at the cost of staging another walkout if they lost once more. But there was every expectation the Russians would again denounce the continued presence of Chinese Nationalists.

Suggests Mediation Call

In corridor discussions, Deputy Foreign Minister Ales Bebler, of Yugoslavia, predicted that "most probable is a Malik speech that we could deal with the Korean question if we were all present"—i.e., if the Chinese Communists were admitted. Bebler also thought the Soviets might make some call for mediation.

Ambassador Tingfu F. Tsiang, Chinese Nationalist delegate, said, "One guess is as good as another," in anticipating Soviet moves, and added that "the main purpose is propaganda."

Warren R. Austin, chief American delegate, said: "I'm not going to make any statement until I go up to Burlington, Vt., to consult an old apple tree in my orchard."

Tribute to U. N. Fighters

Meantime, in the Councils' statement this morning, India joined in tribute to the U. N. fighting men, upholding Council decisions in Korea. Perhaps significantly, the Indian speech made no mention of the Chinese representation issue, although Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru had earlier advocated admitting the Chinese Communists to the U. N. as the first step in ending the Soviet boycott and promoting U. N. mediation in Korea.

During the session, Jean Chauvel of France and Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain, stressed the difficulty of the delaying action fought by the American fighting forces, and termed it outstanding. Sir Gladwyn voiced confidence this phase was now ending, and that thereafter the North Korean aggressors would be forced back from the territory they had overrun.

Ex-Fort Myer GI Missing In Korea War

Sergt. 1/C Richard Charles Heath, former Fort Myer, Va., soldier who was transfered to the Pacific last September, was reported missing in action in Korea yesterday.

His wife, Mrs. Regina A. Heath of 313 S. Royal st., Alexandria, said Sergeant Heath had left for Guam after their honeymoon in September. She was waiting for transportation to join him when the Korean war broke out, she said.

In the Army since 1940, Sergeant Heath was stationed at Fort Myer less than a year and had been on occupation duty in Japan prior to that. His home was in Richfield Springs, N. Y., where his mother, Mrs Margaret Heath, lives.

60 Japanese Greeted Here

By The Associated Press

Vice President Barkley yesterday welcomed a group of Japanese leaders to Washington and expressed a hope for enduring peace and friendship between the United States and Japan.

Barkley addressed 60 government, business and labor leaders who are on the way back to Japan after attending a Moral Rearmament Conference in Switzerland.

The delegation included the mayors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the two Japanese cities hit by atomic bombs during World War II.

"I am highly pleased and honored that you have seen fit to visit our country," Barkley told the group at a brief ceremony outside his Capitol office.

Barkley said he is hopeful the trouble in Korea "will be speedily put down."

He said the United Nations will justify its existence "by putting down aggression wherever it may break down in the world."

Later, in an address to the Senate, Chojrio Kuriyama, a member of the Japanese Diet, said:

"It is our sincere regret that Japan has broken almost a century-old friendship between the two countries. In spite of this big mistake on our part, the magnanimous forgiveness and generosity of America not only allowed Japan to survive, but is helping our recovery."

Japanese Papers Fire Reds

Tokyo, July 28 (U.P.).—Seven major Japanese newspapers and news agencies and the Japanese Broadcasting Corp. today announced the dismissal of almost 300 Communist Party members and fellow travelers.

A spokesman for the Newspaper and Editors Association said a similar wholesale purge is planned in Osaka and other areas of Japan in the next few days.

The newspapers indicated they had decided to follow up Gen. Douglas MacArthur's order purging Communist Party leaders and banning the Communist Party newspaper Akahata.

Kiyoshi Iwamoto, chief news editor of the Kyodo News Agency, pointed specifically to MacArthur's letter of July 18 extending indefinitely the ban on Akahata and indicated the suggestion on today's action came from MacArthur's headquarters.

MacArthur's letter said increasing numbers of Communists were using the "media of public information to propagate its (Communist Party's) tenets of subversion and violence as a means of inciting the irresponsible and lawless minority elements of society to oppose law, disturb order and subvert general welfare."

Britain Alerts Reserves In Regular Army for Call-Up

London, July 28 (AP).—The British War Office tonight halted release of all army regulars whose enlistments are expiring and told volunteer reserves to get ready for duty.

The War Office said the order is "a result of the decision to send land forces to Korea." The ground force will number about 5,000, informed quarters said.

In an apparent hint that the order soon will be extended to the Women's Royal Army Corps, the announcement said instructions for the women's services "will be issued separately."

The spokesman told newsmen it is impossible to say right now how many officers and men will be affected by either the reserve call-up or the freeze on regular discharges. Army draftees, whose fixed term of service is 18 months, will not be affected.

The War Office move follows by two days similar orders from the Royal Navy. The Admiralty said its purpose is to put the British Far Eastern fleet on a "full-scale war footing." Part of this fleet already is engaged off Korea.

Britain's regular army now consists of 184,000 men. Counting draftees, women auxiliaries and the territorials—British equivalent of the United States' National Guard—this country's Army, Navy Guard—this country's army, navy and air forces can muster 827,-soldiers. Of these, 464,000 would be army men and women.

King George VI tonight signed a proclamation of "a case of emergency" which permits the navy to enforce its enlistment freeze and reserve call-up. A similar proclamation will be needed later to formalize the War Office order.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, will lay and bless the cornerstone. He will be assisted by the Rev. Charles E. Roach, pastor, and his assistant, the Rev. William F. Murphy. The dedication address will be made by the Rev. Maurice King, pastor of Holy Name Church. Bishop McNamara also will celebrate benediction.

The auditorium, seating more than 600 persons, is expected to be completed by early 1951. It will be used for religious services also as the present church is too small to accommodate the congregation of more than 5000 persons.

Approximately 550 students will be accommodated in the new school, scheduled for completion by September, 1951. The Sisters of the Holy Cross will teach and will occupy the convent when completed.

Ground for the new construction was broken on February 5 by Father Roach. The architects are Ross and Walton, and the builders, the Tuckman-Barbee Construction Co.

Korean Crisis Creates Need For Chaplains in Services

By Connie Zatkovich
Post Reporter

The Continental Congress authorized chaplains for the War of Independence on the 29th of July, 1775.

In World War I, 2363 chaplains were commissioned, and in World War II more than 8000.

Today, 175 years since the first ministers and priests were asked to volunteer for service in war, another appeal has been made through the Department of Defense.

In view of the Korean crisis, the Departments of the Army and Navy this week issued their first calls for reserve chaplains to volunteer for active duty. Naval reserve chaplains in the grades of lieutenant commander and below, and under 50 years of age, are requested to submit application to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington 25, D. C. The Army is accepting reserve chaplains in the grades of first lieutenants to 41 years of age, and captains to 45 years. Reserves are not being ordered to active duty at this time.

Air Force Call

The Air Force announced yesterday it is ordering to duty 50 reserve chaplains of first lieutenant and captain rank under 42 years of age.

Before being accepted from the reservists, or before chaplains are commissioned as officers, there must be "approval of appropriate ecclesiastical authorities."

The General Commission on Chaplains, 122 Maryland ave. ne., acts as the coordinating body for Protestant denominations in their work with the armed services.

About 10 Protestant groups, however, including Methodists and Episcopalians, handle their own ecclesiastical indorsements directly.

The Catholic indorsements come through the Military Ordinate in New York, headed by Francis Cardinal Spellman, military vicar. The Most Rev. William R. Arnold, military delegate and Bishop of Thocaea, who was the former Chief of Chaplains of the Army, is assistant to Cardinal Spellman.

Rabbis Named in 1861

Clearance headquarters for Jewish chaplains is The National Jewish Welfare Board, New York. Rabbi Aryeh Lev is in charge. It was not until 1861 that rabbis were named as clergy eligible for service as chaplains.

At the meeting of the General Commission on Chaplains here last November, Major General Roy Hartford Parker, Army Chief of Chaplains, reported that 760 chaplains were then on active duty in the Army. Chaplain Rear Admiral Stanton W. Salisbury, chief of Navy chaplains placed the Navy total at 444. Major General Charles I. Carpenter, reported 474 on active duty with the Air Force.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish chaplains have administered heroically during war years. They have served all faiths—counseling, Baptizing, visiting the sick and wounded, administrating, burying the dead, and conducting services. Their services often were "beyond the call of duty." Many hold Distinguished Service Crosses, Purple Hearts, and three chaplains of World War II were presented the Croix de Guerre.

Commemorative Stamp

The personal sacrifice of four Army chaplains—two Protestants, a Catholic and a Jew—who went down with a ship, linking arms in prayer after having given up their lifejackets to men of their seagoing parish—has been commemorated on U. S. postage stamps.

When the first Korean casualties arrived at Bolling Air Base on Wednesday, July 26, an Air Force chaplain was there to give official greetings and administer to them, Chaplain Norris T. Morton, at the base, said that the men talked of furloughs and leaves, or asked advice. Other chaplains were at their service at Walter Reed Hospital.

Ceremony to Mark Debt Free Status Of Fifth Baptist

A note-burning ceremony will be held at the Fifth Baptist Church, 609 E st. sw., Sunday, the ninety-third birthday of the church.

A $12,000 note has been paid off and the church is now free of debt, the Rev. John T. Coburn, pastor, announced.

At the 8 p. m. service, C. C. James, chairman of the finance committee, will give the history of the debt. The District Baptist Convention will be represented by Herbert Ludwig, vice president.

A reception for members and friends will be held.

Nineteen members, affiliated with the church for 50 years or more, will be honored at the 11 a. m. worship. The Rev. Dr. Clyde Taylor, former interim pastor of Metropolitan Baptist Church, 6th and A sts. ne., is guest speaker.

Hoover Calls on All Citizens to Help FBI In Fight Against Red Spies and Sabotage

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover yesterday urged all citizens to fight "espionage, sabotage and subversive activities" in the Nation by reporting facts—but only facts—to the FBI.

"The internal security of the United States," Hoover said, "can be assured with the cooperation, aid and assistance of every law-abiding person in our Nation.

"The President . . . in restating the responsibilities of the FBI has called upon all law enforcement officers, patriotic organizations and individuals to report information . . . to the FBI.

"Plans have already been made and are in operation," he continued, "whereby the law enforcement agencies of the Nation are working in close cooperation with the FBI."

Seven Suggestions

Listing seven suggestions "to assist patriotic organizations and individuals," Hoover made it clear what the FBI is NOT interested in:

Malicious gossip or idle rumors; what a person thinks; drawing conclusions based on insufficient evidence.

On the last point he warned, "the forces which are most anxious to weaken our internal security are not always easy to identify.

"Communists have been trained in deceit and secret work toward the day when they hope to replace our American way of life with a Communist dictatorship. They utilize cleverly camouflaged movements, such as some peace groups and civil rights organizations, to achieve their sinister purposes.

Near As Your Phone

The other six points in Hoover's memorandum are:

1. "The FBI is as near to you as your telephone. . . You can communicate with the FBI by telephone, letter or call at our nearest office.

2. "Feel free to furnish all facts in your possession. Many times a small bit of information might furnish the data we are seeking. If you have any information of sabotage, espionage, or subversive activities contact the FBI.

3. "The FBI is interested in receiving facts; we are not interested in what a person thinks, but what he does which undermines our internal security. Avoid reporting malicious gossip or idle rumors.

4. "Do not circulate rumors about subversive activities or draw conclusions from information you furnish the FBI. The data you possess might be incomplete or only partially accurate. By drawing conclusions based on insufficient evidence, grave injustices might result to innocent persons.

5. "Once you have reported your information to the FBI, do not endeavor to make private investigations. This can best be done by trained investigators who have access to data acquired over the years on individuals engaged in subversive activities.

6. "Be alert. The greatest defenders against sabotage are the loyal American workmen who are producing the materials and weapons for our defense. They can be the sentinels of defense in every walk of life."

Washington Resident

Kelly, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been a Washington resident almost continuously since 1920. He was in newspaper work before he joined the Parks staff in 1931. He has been in charge of public relations, use of park facilities, public ceremonies and events, operation of national memorials and supervision of the U. S. Park Police.

Thompson formerly served in landscape architect and planning positions in the National Park Service. He became assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks in 1945.

Wrong Again, Say Two More Of McCarthy

Bethel, Vt., July 28 (U.P.).—The wife of Arctic Explorer Wilhjalmur Stefansson backed Owen Lattimore today in his denial of charges that he knowingly sold his property here to two Communists.

The charges were made in Washington by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wisc.), who said property transfers are one of the ways the "Communist Party handles its payoffs."

He said he had no evidence Lattimore "was or was not being paid off," but the Lattimores had sold the property to Ordway Southward, whom he described as Communist candidate for governor of Alabama in 1942.

Lattimore, who purchased a half share of the property from Mr. and Mrs. Stefansson, said he sold it to a "complete stranger."

Mrs. Stefansson said that was true. She said "no one knew anything about the Southards."

McCarthy's charges aroused Gov. Harold J. Arthur, now training with the National Guard at Pine Camp, N. Y. He promised an investigation of the Senator's statement that Bethel "contains a little group of Communist sympathizers."

[The Associated Press quoted Bethel Town Clerk R. E. Bundy as saying Senator McCarthy was "apparently at least 50 percent wrong" in his estimate that Lattimore made about $3000 profit in the sale. He said records show Lattimore apparently received only $2250, not $4500, and no cash changed hands.]

Court Grants 4 of 9 Requests Of Remington

New York, July 28 (A.P.).—Judge Sidney Sugarman ordered the Government today to answer four of nine items in a bill of particulars requested by William W. Remington, former Government economist charged wiht denying falsely he ever was a Communist.

Sugarman ruled the United States Attorney's office must, among other things, tell when and where it contends Remington joined the Communist Party and what unit of the party he allegedly joined.

Among the five requests denied was one that the Government be ordered to define the term "member of the Communist Party."

The Government contended this was a question for the jury to decide.

Date of Remington's trial has not been set.

Mihailovic's Attorney Gets 3-Year Term

Belgrade, July 28 (A.P.).—Dragic Joksimovic, who was defense attorney at the treason trial of Gen. Draja Mihailovic in 1946, was sentenced today to three years in prison on charges of promoting restoration of the old Yugoslav monarchy. Six co-defendants received terms ranging from one to three years.

All were accused of spreading reports of imminent war between East and West which would enable King Peter to return.

Atlantic Pact Nations Agree To Speed Arms

London, July 28 (A.P.).—The civilian directors of the North Atlantic Alliance announced a unanimous agreement tonight on ways to accelerate defense production in Western Europe.

The directors are deputy foreign ministers of the 12 member nations. They opened secret sessions here Tuesday under chairmanship of Charles Spofford of the United States.

Details of the agreement were withheld. But Spofford told newsmen there have been tangible results in the drive to rearm the West against communism

"The Council of Deputies took note of the additional military effort already announced by several of the treaty countries and unanimously approved certain recommendations designed to accelerate defense production," said a communique.

It said the deputies "have discussed the practical measures required to build up the defenses of the West in the shortest possible time," and continued:

"The deputies are unanimously agreed that the deterioration in the world situation by the unprovoked act of aggression committed against the Republic of (South) Korea, which is now being dealt with by the United Nations, makes it more important than ever for the governments of the North Atlantic Treaty countries to accelerate the steps necessary for their common defense."

Soviet Production Figures Hint New Stress on Arms

London, July 28 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union has stepped up industrial expansion and is speeding production of steel and oil, Moscow radio revealed today.

The emphasis on "capital construction"—production of heavy equipment and industrial plants—has become stronger than in previous years, hinting at increased armaments.

This emerged today from a statement of the Council of Ministers on the fulfilment of the state plan for the second quarter of this year.

The statement said the volume of all "capital construction" has increased 31 percent in the past 12 months.

Gross industrial output was said to have risen 21 percent and production targets set by the five-year plan were claimed to have been reached ahead of schedule.

The statement emphasized that more effective production methods are being introduced to save raw materials, fuel and power. It said:

1. Heavy industry increased the volume of "building and assembly work" over last year by 25 percent.

2. "Capital construction" in the iron, steel, engineering and building materials industries increased a fourth.

3. Construction work in power stations rose 37 percent and in the oil industry 50 percent.

These figures do not reflect the actual size of potentials in the various branches of industry. Nothing is released on that.

Production, by comparison with last year, is stated to have increased most in motor cranes, steam turbines, motor cars, ball-bearings and electric locomotives.

Iron and steel output has increased by about a fifth each in the past 12 months, according to the official returns.

Soviet iron production was listed by the UN Economic Commission for Europe for 1940 as 14,900,000 and crude steel 18,300,000 tons, in addition to 13,200,000 tons of rolled steel.

Targets of the five-year plan—claimed to have been reached or exceeded last year—put iron output at 19,500,000 tons; crude steel at 25,400,000 and rolled steel at 17,800,000 tons. On the basis of latest claimed increases, Russia now would seem to produce steel on an approximate level of between 28 and 30 million tons a year.

Oil production—one of the most problematic items in Russia's economy hitherto—has increased in the past 12 months 17 percent, according to the Soviet statement.

Bound of Baskerville Lands Him in Jail

Baltimore, July 28 (A.P.).—James Baskerville, 23, today was sentenced to nine months in the House of Correction for stealing a dozen bathing suits from a store on July 15.

Running from the store to elude police, Baskerville hurdled a fence.

Peasants Stage Protest March On Belgrade

Belgrade, July 28 (U.P.).—In the largest demonstration of its kind ever allowed in an eastern European Communist country, between 500 and 600 stubbornly independent Serb peasants marched to this Yugoslav capital today to protest alleged abuses by their local Communist rulers.

The peasants were orderly, not even carrying a banner or placard stating their grievances. But they were deadly serious as they tramped in their work clothes early this morning to the office of Petar Stambolic, Premier of the Republic of Serbia, to present their protest petition.

Hundreds more from the same area, the country of Grotzka, about 12 to 25 miles southeast of Belgrade, were expected Saturday and Sunday.

Western observers regarded the protest as indicative of the change in political climate in Premier Marshal Tito's country in the two years following the break with the Cominform. Such a demonstration would not be allowed in neighboring Soviet satellite states, they declared.

The peasants claimed that under existing law, peasants owning less than three hectares (7.4 acres) were exempt from the government's "buy up" program of crops at prices usually from one fifth to one tenth of the free market value.

Slot Machine Knell

Having been smoked out of its earlier indecision, the House Interstate Commerce Committee came up with the right answer in approving the bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines. It could hardly have afforded to delay further in view of the strong pressure from the Attorney General's Crime Conference and from the International Association of Chiefs of Police. As a matter of fact, the House version is now a better bill than that previously passed by the Senate. It has a tighter definition of slot machines so as to include "one-armed bandits" and payoff pinball machines but to exclude legitimate coin-operated vending machines; it also leaves to States in which such gambling devices are now legal the responsibility of passing specific legislation exempting themselves from provisions of the ban.

House approval ought now to be a matter of course, provided that the Rules Committee follows the lead of the Interstate Commerce Committee. As this newspaper has noted previously, legislation outlawing other forms of gambling and racketeering ought to await the report of the Kefauver Crime Investigating Committee. But there need not be the slightest doubt that slot machines are an unmitigated evil. They are usable only as gambling devices, and their operators thrive because it is easy to evade local laws by fleeing across State lines. They will be missed only in the way that a sucker misses someone to mulct him of his money.

Defense Production Bill

Both Senators and Representatives are debating whether the bill authorizing the President to set up a system of priorities and allocations and to requisition materials and facilities for national defense goes far enough. But there is also considerable opposition on the ground that the measure is too sweeping in scope. Under its broad definition of materials, for instance, Senator Taft claims that it would be possible for the President to shut down any industry by refusing to allocate it materials.

The requested authority to requisition materials and facilities needed for national defense is also under attack on the ground that it would permit the President to take over any plant that, in his judgment, was needed for national defense. Another provision of the bill permitting the President to purchase raw materials for Government use and resale has aroused members of the farm bloc, because it would enable the Commodity Credit Corporation to sell its price-supported surpluses at a loss. According to Senator Taft, this section of the bill would make it possible for the Government "to buy and sell to an unlimited extent, take a loss, or buy high and sell cheap, and, of course, stand the difference, which would amount to a subsidy on agricultural products and on foods."

It is evident from these criticisms that the bill provides for much more comprehensive controls than the President had been expected to recommend. Nevertheless, a great deal of the criticism is based on the assumption that if the powers are granted they will be abused. In the emergency now confronting the Nation, the executive arm has to be trusted to use discretion in exercising any extraordinary powers that may be conferred on it. Moreover, the requested powers would lapse on June 30, 1952, or could be terminated by a concurrent resolution of Congress before that date. That provision alone affords considerable protection against abuse.

To limit the control program to a few specified commodities, or impose numerous legislative restrictions on the exercise of any of the powers requested, would seriously hamper the defense effort by introducing rigidity into a program that to be effective must be flexible. As assurance that the requested controls will not be employed to socialize industry in the name of defense, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, who will handle most of the allocation controls, said that he would try to operate them on a voluntary basis. In his opinion, the great majority of businessmen are willing to cooperate with the Government and make whatever sacrifices are required of them. Mandatory controls are needed, however, to bring a recalcitrant minority into line and make sure that voluntary cooperation will not, as Mr. Sawyer said, "result in a penalty for those who cooperate and a reward for those who do not."

It was brought out in the course of the hearings that the power to requisition facilities needed for military purposes has already been granted under the Selective Service Act. The enlarged powers asked for are intended to provide for the needs of the civilian economy. If these should be neglected, the best-laid military plans might break down. The bill also provides for guaranteed production loans to industry. We think it is questionable whether the discredited RFC should be one of the guaranteeing agencies, but the emphasis on private financing to expand productive capacity is significant evidence of a preference for relying on private enterprise to do the job. Further evidence of the Administration's desire to enlist the support of private industry is afforded by a provision exempting actions taken at the request of the President from the antitrust laws and Federal Trade Commission Act.

Mounting shortages of articles required for national defense make it necessary to take immediate action to conserve and apportion scarce supplies of materials and speed up production of various commodities needed for military purposes and stockpiling. The danger that the grant of these control powers will be misused is, we believe, greatly exaggerated. The greater danger is that the program may be launched too late or be hamstrung by attaching hampering restrictions on the exercise of executive power.

Moscow Flipflop

It is typical of Russian political strategy that Deputy Foreign Minister Malik should return to the Security Council just before the Council got around to discussing the future of Korea. Since January Mr. Malik had insisted that he would take no part in the work of the Council so long as Nationalist China remained a member. The Kremlin had loudly proclaimed that a principle was at stake. But Moscow never worries about reversing the declarations of its diplomats or abandoning what it has set up as principle when it seems expedient to do so. Obviously a return to the Council now serves Russian purposes better than continuation of the boycott. But the specific reasons for this abrupt change of policy remain obscure.

Some United Nations officials believe that Mr. Malik's announcement presages a ruling by himself (as soon as he becomes president of the Council on August 1 under the alphabetical rotation system prescribed by the rules of that body) to the effect that Dr. Tsiang, National Chinese representative, is no longer a member. Such a ruling could be upset only by the Council itself acting through a majority of 7 out of the 11 votes. It is not likely, however, that any scheme of this sort would succeed, for the Council's rules provide that if the credentials of a delegate are challenged he shall retain his voting rights until the Council reaches a decision. It would be an outrageous encroachment upon U. N. principles to allow a chairman to oust members of the Council without a clear-cut majority vote.

Another possibility is a desire on the part of the Kremlin to paralyze the Security Council in case of further acts of Communist aggression. There are many indications that Moscow did not expect the Council to act so vigorously against the aggression in Korea. Now it is on notice that the U. N. will not be content with passing resolutions when militarists substitute explosives for peaceful methods of settling disputes. Certainly Moscow cannot afford to let 52 nations line up against any future outburst of violence that may have been planned if such unity can be frustrated.

The meaning of Korea is that the free world will not make concession after concession to appease an aggressor. That is a position which Stalin can understand. Indeed, in the days when Russia herself was in danger of aggression before World War II he taunted what he called the "nonaggressive states, primarily England, France and the U. S. A." for making concessions to Germany and Japan. He knows that if the U. N. can now retain its unity and avoid appeasement the way of the aggressor will be hard. We make take it for granted that when and if another aggressive Moscow-inspired maneuver begins the U. S. S. R. delegate will wield his veto to keep the Council inactive.

It is equally certain, however, that these tactics will not paralyze the U. N. When Russia balked further investigation of the guerilla warfare in Greece in 1947 the Council transferred the issue to the Assembly, where there is no veto power. The Assembly voted to send a commission to the Balkans, and it became a notable factor (backing up the generous aid given by the United States) in ending the war and saving Greece from the fate of Hungary, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia. Even with the Council dormant, the U. N. can mobilize the strength of the free world for peace and decency if there is the disposition among the free nations to work together.

Certainly one reason for Mr. Malik's return is a desire to control the settlement of the Korean affair. It is a pity that the Council did not take advantage of his absence to make a more positive declaration of its policy in regard to the future of Korea. To be sure, the Assembly adopted a policy of unity, independence and self-government for Korea back in 1947, and that pledge cannot be wiped out by aggression. But it needs to be reiterated with a new U. N. guarantee behind it. If that becomes impossible in the Security Council, the question will have to be taken up again in the Assembly at its September meeting. Meanwhile, it is a piece of good fortune that the vigorous anti-aggression movement that the Council has set in motion cannot be vetoed by the Soviet delegate on his return. For the forces resisting the Korean invaders are not being directed by the Council, but by the United States acting at the Council's request and under its general supervision.

More Men Called

The Army's request for 80,000 more men under selective service brings the reality of the conflict in Korea even closer to home. With the 20,000 already called, this will swell the total of men drafted to 100,000 by the end of October. These are the men needed as replacements, to bring existing units up to strength and to release trained units to fight. With the conflict dragging on, the chances are increasing that some of the draftees themselves may be pressed into combat after training.

Under the new strength ceiling asked by the President the Army will be able to take in about 240,000 men. Not all of these, of course, will be draftees; the Army expects to call more reservists and National Guardsmen, and it is hoping for a substantial number of volunteers. The limiting factor on use of the draft has been availability of training facilities, for each man called must receive a minimum of 14 weeks' training. Two training centers have been reactivated. There are plans to train some draftees as overstrength in present units if sufficient housing is available.

According to present plans, reservists summoned to duty will be limited largely to men specially qualified either for the Korean fighting or as replacements—motor truck companies, medical, signal and engineer personnel, with the emphasis on enlisted men and junior officers. It is curious in this connection that, although various smaller National Guard units are being ordered to service, Guard divisions as such still are not being called. The Guard has usually been regarded as the second line of defense and its men are trained and paid accordingly. We hope that fear of State political repercussions is not dissuading the Army from calling the Guard units it really needs.

Despite the lifting of the ceiling, the present program will not provide the minimum size Army which military chiefs believe necessary. They have called for a minimum of 12 full Regular Army divisions—now probably more—instead of the 10 which only now are being built to full strength. In order to provide a permanent striking force plus units for international policing, more men and more money will be needed. Beyond this, the use made of infantry in Korea emphasizes the desirability of universal military training, which President Truman and the armed forces have called for since the end of World War II. It would not be a substitute for strength in being, but it would at least fill the National Guard and provide the Army, Navy and Air Force with reserves of semitrained men. Now is not the time to place UMT in operation, because the overhead it would require would hinder rather than help the Korean fighting. But now might well be the time to enact a law to be implemented when the Korean action is wound up.

Military Aid

The brief ceremony at the White House that attended the President's signing of the foreign military assistance bill had a significance beyond the importance of the material aid provided by the measure. It authorizes $1,222,500,000 for the second year of aid to nations opposing the spread of communism with the aim, as the President observed, of creating "the kind of strength which will deter potential aggressors from attacking so formidable and united a group; and to defeat aggression should it come." Thus America continues to be the arsenal, while it is also serving as the active champion of democracy.

The military assistance measure was adopted in the Senate by a unanimous vote and in the House by a vote of 361 to 1, Representative Marcantonio registering the lone dissent. "Such support," Mr. Truman said, "serves to remind those bent on aggression that they dare not count on a division of opinion among our people to help them gain their evil ends." It is one of earth's unfortunate paradoxes, apparently, that free men are able to unite—that is, to resolve the conflicts which are an expression of their freedom—only when they are mutually threatened by aggression from outside. And it is, conversely, a fortunate irony that aggression, by creating this unity, brings about in the end its own destruction.

Had it not been for events in Korea, it is unlikely that so great a degree of unanimity would have prevailed in Congress over the military assistance bill. It is also unlikely that the world's free peoples would have been drawn into so close a coalition for utilizing the aid which the United States is to furnish. Let us hope that the moral will receive some attention where its meaning most needs to be understood.

THE BRIDGE

A bridge is being born! Each time you lift
Your eyes to it, the trick's to get them down—
See how the girders reach out, strong and swift,
And how, aloft in space, they trump the town
They aim to serve . . . By mammoth arches framed,
The tidal river shows, sea-green, a fighter—
Until men span its course, unruled, untamed!
About the hard-won piers cling tug and lighter.

The sun acclaims the marvel every day,
And takes one last, long look before it sets
At red-gold steel working edging toward the bay
As though it measured sky. Now one forgets
Such wonders ever were (or are to be)
Compared with this, to thrill and to instruct
A host of home-town lads who've yet to see
The Roman Aqueduct.

38th Parallel

Whenever the much-awaited United Nations offensive in Korea becomes a reality, it might be well to have plotted some political victories to go along with the military one.

Is there not some way we can occupy all of Korea with the forces of the United Nations. Korea is a U. N. child. With such ground to stand on we could send airborne and amphibious troops in force to occupy the northern half. And, even if we did it initially for pure military expediency, we could gain occupation time by "restoring order," just as the Soviets have used their armies in eastern Europe.

While the democratic-spirited countries cannot use all the tools of the Politiburo, such as slave camps and atrocities, we surely must quit relying solely on moral force, as expressed by words and defensive actions only: Moral righteousness, of course, must accompany the fight, but it certainly is obvious that Russia's best weapon is our sense of ethics.

Another stalemate at the thirty-eighth parallel would just prove to be a victory for Russia, I'm afraid.

Milk Purity

In The Washington Post's account of the July 10 hearing on the milk controversy one reads, "One fact stood out plainly ahead of all others in the hearing. All witnesses and both sides admitted that Washington has the best milk of any large city except San Francisco."

If presently used methods have given us one of the two best city milk supplies in the Nation, one wonders why there should be any desire to change these methods. The price of this unusually fine milk has been shown to be below the average for the country as a whole.

We know that regulations have been established to protect us from impure milk and we are thankful that we no longer have epidemics of disease which might be caused by milk. Nevertheless, we know that the price of purity is eternal vigilance and that there may be degrees of difference in the purity of a city's milk supply. We also know that we cannot be too careful about the milk we give to young children whose immunity to germs may not be as well developed as that of adults. It seems to me, that if, in order to fill Washington's needs for milk, some milk must be accepted which is not quite as pure (by bacteria count) as that produced by the best producers, it would be well to admit this and to mark the bottles accordingly. If necessary we might have two prices based on quality of milk.

I have been told that the bacteria count of raw milk received by some Washington pasteurizers is extremely low, indicating unusually careful handling. If such milk comes consistently from the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association or from any other source, it seems to me that the producers should be given recognition for their excellent product and the public informed of their consistent work in producing very pure milk.

Defense Taxes

I have formed the habit of not expecting to agree with Senator Taft's opinions. But he is thoroughly right in demandng that the present war be financed by taxation and not by borrowing.

When we used to borrow money abroad, it was possible (wisely or unwisely) to throw upon a future generation the burden of paying for a war. Now that we borrow only from ourselves, the pretense that the future will pay is flim-flam. The money for this year's war must come out of our pockets this year, since there is nowhere else for it to come from. It must come from the pockets in which there is money.

If it comes out in taxes, the job is done with. If it comes out in the purchase of bonds, and we expect those bonds to be paid, then at the maturity of the bonds the taxes to pay the bonds will have to be levied. Those taxes will have to be collected mainly out of the bondholders; out of whom else could they mainly be collected?

Silent Prayer

Mrs. Donovan in your July 24 issue makes the suggestion that all church bells be rung in the States for 10 minutes, beginning with Alabama. Woe is me! More noise for the American people. Music (noise, I say) in buses, screaming brakes on cars, locomotive whistles, yelling children everywhere, roar on roar down every street, and now she says ring the bells!

Might I suggest that a little quiet and less noise would be most appropriate at this time and at all times? Sit down and meditate and possibly get down on your knees for a period of silent prayer. T. S. WILLIAMS.

Japan And Far East Defense

The decisive step taken by the West in meeting the Communist challenge in Korea had at least one salutary effect. Despite the ominous forebodings, it did a great deal to dispel the uncertainties that perplexed the peoples of Asia. They saw clearly that there was, after all, a limit to the policy of so-called "containment" and "cold war."

The issue thrust by the Red infiltration toward the Sea of Japan can hardly be minimized. It is obviously one of law versus force, universal in its scope and application. That was, we were told, why the United Nations acted immediately at the instance of the Washington Government, since its very existence was at stake.

It is now patent that this war of ideologies, hot or cold, will be a spirited and protracted one. In these circumstances, any arrangement aimed at restoration of the status quo in Korea must be regarded as but a temporary expedient. Nor would the use of atomic bombs afford a solution for good in the cases of continental countries.

Considered in this light, some adequate measures must be devised by the allied powers to safeguard peace and security in the Far East. At this moment a small contingent of British naval and Australian air forces is supporting the American operations in the hard-hit peninsula. Others may follow it, though with inevitable drawbacks in point of time and distance. Meanwhile, the movements of China's Red armies in Manchuria and along the zones menacing Formosa and Indo-China may mean more than a mere gesture.

The free countries of Asia are thus at the mercy of the Kremlin no less than those of Europe and Near East. It was doubtless this feeling of danger which underlay the congressional advice urging the formation of a Pacific counterpart of the North Atlantic Alliance. Granting that its native constituents are unprepared for the heavy responsibility, we still must admit the rapid deterioration of Far Eastern conditions.

In view of this, one of the pertinent but almost threadbare questions is, what should be the future status of Japan? A recent New York report may be taken as a sort of answer to it. There is, the dispatch runs in effect, a growing belief in authoritative circles that the United States Government would ask Japan "to grant long-term rights to hold military bases and move troops within the empire," and this as part of "a quick peace settlement" pending a final treaty among the powers. Apparently the Korean conflict has served the purpose of a lever.

How can a better approach be made to the Japanese problems? A suggestion that may not be altogether inopportune at this juncture is that the allied powers should at once conclude with Japan a full-fledged peace, "long overdue." In other words, there can be an unconditional treaty (save some supervisory stipulations, if need be) terminating the technical war between them and Japan. Another pact, taking her as an equal in the common struggle against communism but containing whatever necessary provisions for defensive purposes, would just as well tally with the military and naval requirements of the allied governments.

A modus vivendi such as this would have various advantages over the formulas so far mooted. Among others, it would absolve the Japanese from the mortifying feeling of injustice and coercion. That will surely perpetuate their admiration and friendship for the Americans, against which a negligible minority has been vociferously clamoring. In the next place it would open the doors of the United Nations to Japan whose admission, to some extent, may counterbalance that of Red China. Perhaps some critics may object to any such lenient treatment of a former enemy, but they, in doing so, will have to recant the immutable Sermon on the Mount.

As matters stand, the Japanese themselves are quite content with the new outlook of life which would assure them peace and prosperity in normal times. In fact, they have the least desire to alter of their own accord the constitutional injunction in respect of armament, inasmuch as the prospective increase of their police force would suffice for the consideration of internal order. Consequently, all they are longing for is to be let alone—a circumstance that gave vent to the expression of certain impractical views during Mr. Dulles' visit to the Far East.

It will be seen, however, that this position of the Japanese is in no way incompatible with their willingness to contribute their share toward the improvement of the world situation. Even now they are talking about the proper means of cooperations with the United Nations. For instance, a section of their press is recommending the sending of a Red Cross corps to Korea. This would not count much. But unless giving the freedom of choice that is probably the length they can very well go no matter what may be their plans.

Conversational Defense

By Malvina Lindsay

Parlor Perils

BATTLE SCARRED from recent conversational melees over McCarthyism, the welfare state, China policy, race discrimination, unification of the armed forces, other issues of home front guerilla action, I rushed again for help to my favorite charm school.

I was assigned to my former instructor, Professor Gulliver Shrugg, retired speech and slogan writer, who boasts of having done ghost service on both sides of every national controversy of the last 30 years.

"Peace, it's wonderful—in conversation!" I gasped, limply sinking into a chair. "What technique can I pursue to obtain it? I can't talk constantly about the weather."

"Weather!" exclaimed Professor Shrugg. "Most dangerous of all subjects! Never, never mention the weather! Most people are dissatisfied with it. Hence it reminds them of somebody they don't like. From there it's just a step to assessing blame for the rain, heat, humidity or whatnot. Before you know it you're knee-deep in Acheson, McCarthy, Stalin, Truman, Taft and, inevitably—Roosevelt."

I sighed. "I've never stooped so low as to relate details of my operations. But——"

"Suicidal!" interrupted the professor. "It would bring in 'socialized medicine'!

"Of course," continued my mentor, "it's elementary to tell you that you're not to touch conversationally Korea, Formosa, China, any part of Asia. Europe is almost as dangerous. South Africa will lead into the race problem—and inevitably Mrs. Roosevelt."

WHAT PART of the globe can I mention?"

"I think possibly the Banzare Coast in Antarctica——"

"Never mind! I have an ideal Recipes! And what hors d'oeuvres were served at the last cocktail party."

Professor Shrugg paled. "Are you crazy? That would lead straight to the Brannan farm plan . . . to Truman . . . to Roosevelt! Now it's also elementary," continued the noted conversational strategist, "to tell you to avoid even the outskirts of religion, or more accurately, sectarianism."

"But what if I talk about basic religion—charity, brotherhood, love?"

"Who would listen? And someone might turn you into the FBI as an appeaser."

"I suppose," I ventured, "I can always fall back on clothes?"

"Very dangerous! You get into colors—red, pink, mauve, heliotrope, lavender—the subversive aspects have unlimited possibilities. By the way, another subject to be avoided is books. Many of them deal in ideas!"

"How about mystery stories?" I asked brightly.

Professor Shrugg gave me a scornful glance. "Do you want to drag up all that master spy stuff again?"

"I have it!" I exclaimed. "A subject always fascinating and safe—at least politically. I mean, er-er, sex."

Visibly nervous, Professor Shrugg glanced around apprehensively. "That carries as much conversational explosive power as the atom bomb. Someone will bring up pervert . . . then subversive.

"Also avoid any route that leads to personalities. Especially try to detour from MacArthur Johnson, Tydings, John L. Lewis, Cardinal Spellman, Bishop Oxnam, Oscar Ewing, Henry Wallace, Joe Grundy, General Vaughn, Errol Flynn, Donald Duck——"

"Isn't it a fact," I interrupted, "that the person spoiling for a fight is going to arrive conversationally at the State Department, China, the Taft-Hartley Act or whatever he's riled up about no matter what you discuss?"

"Possibly," admitted Professor Shrugg. "But your job is to hold the floor with a sufficient supply of safe, dull trivia."

"But isn't that idea contrary to our American tradition of public discussion of vital issues?"

"What discussion? I haven't heard any. Have you? I thought we were talking about vituperation."

"So we are. But I'm wondering if instead of all this skirmishing it wouldn't be better to rise boldly and outshout everybody with 'Shut up you mental pigmies Fighting each other this way when the enemy's breaking the door down!'"

"We-ll yes—if you had the nerve."

"I—I haven't," I said meekly.

"In that case," said Professor Shrugg, "there are only two peaceful ways out. One is to say firmly, 'Since it's evident that our minds have no meeting ground on this, suppose we talk about, well, say the starlings.' The other is to excuse yourself politely saying you're meeting Joe Stalin and Winnie Churchill for cocktails."

Unification

Your continuous twaddle for "unification," is dull, to put it mildly. I trust your premise is not based on winning a war. Any educated person knows that this has never been accomplished under unified command. We are now reaping the reward for the unforgivable service battle, due entirely to the idiotic idea of unification. It has neither saved us money or strengthened our defenses. The less said about it from now on, the better.

A Communication

What To Do About The War Criminals

By Morris Amchan

Former Deputy Chief Counsel for War Crimes at Nuernberg

AN AGGRESSIVE war and unlawful invasion does not just happen. It takes a tremendous amount of planning and preparation. The battle reports from Korea attest to the thoroughness of that planning and preparation. Again we search for the answer to the question: Who is responsible for setting in motion the military machine of Red Korea to embark on a war of aggression and illegal invasion and commit a breach of the peace of mankind?

It was only yesterday that we were present at the inquest of Nazi Germany. We shall again have to hold an inquest, but this time over Korea. The story that will be unfolded will be the same, only the characters will change.

In the meantime we are engaged in a police action for the United Nations. To supplement that police action, it is earnestly suggested that the preparations ought now to be made by the United Nations for holding the inquest over Korea. In short, we should let the responsible officials of Red Korea, and any other persons exercising authority with them, know that they will be held answerable before an international criminal tribunal for their crimes.

NUERNBERG and Tokyo have already established the international legal precedent, that persons holding high positions who substantially participate in the planning, preparation, initiation or waging wars of aggression or invasions of other countries are guilty of the commission of "the supreme international crime."

The difficulty, as our experience at Nuernberg disclosed, is one of application of the principle and the precedents to the facts of the case. Rearmament, in and of itself, is not illegal. Only when rearmament is accompanied by planning and preparation for aggressive war, is it illegal. Then the initiation of aggressive war itself becomes the point at which the crime can be said to have been committed.

The decisive factor is the necessity of establishing a link between the initiation of aggressive war, and the planning and preparation therefor. As a practical matter, the political leaders who make the decision to launch a war of aggression are the individuals who may later be held responsible criminally. And only to the extent that military leaders partake in this political decision, or knowingly participate in it, can they be held responsible for participating in the planning, preparations and initiation of wars of aggression.

There is however, another feature of this international crime which deserves more attention. Participation in the "waging" of aggressive wars and illegal invasions is a separate and distinct crime. The crime of initiation has already been committed. The serious consequences, the brutalities and dislocations occur during the "waging" of the war.

To limit the excesses of war we have rules of warfare; and the concept of war crimes and crimes against humanity relate to the violation of those "humane" rules of warfare. But that is different from knowingly participating in the "waging" of aggressive war, became criminal responsibility attaches when high officials substantially participate in its waging, even though they may not personally commit any of the conventional types of war crimes or crimes against humanity.

IN THE last of Nuernberg trials, Ministries case, the tribunal stated: "We are not to be understood as holding that one who knows that a war of aggression has been initiated is to be relieved of criminal responsibility if he thereafter wages it."

While there is no doubt of the validity of the principle, there is great difficulty in its application because knowledge of the special fact that the war launched is aggressive, is necessarily limited to the handful of political and military leaders who participated in the decision to initiate the war of aggression. The private citizen (as the tribunal stated in the I. G. Farben case), is not required to decide that his country has become an aggressor; and that he must lay aside his loyalty to his homeland, or take the risk of being adjudged guilty of participating in the commission of the crime of waging aggressive war on the one hand, or of becoming a traitor on the other, if he makes a decision based upon facts of which he has but vague knowledge.

There was no international authority, during the World War II period, that could resolve this dilemma. There is such an authority now—the United Nations. The Security Council has already determined that the attack on South Korea is aggressive and a breach of the peace. There is now available the means to invoke those provisions of international law which are designed to limit and contain an aggression already launched.

The United Nations should adopt a resolution stating that under international law it is not only a crime to initiate a war of aggression, but to participate in its "waging" when it is known to be aggressive, is likewise criminal. Such a declaration would serve notice on high officials who are in a position to substantially contribute to the "waging" of the aggressive war, of their responsibility under international law.

THE GENERAL Assembly, as far back as 1946, asked its International Law Commission to draft a code of offenses against the peace and security of mankind as part of a broader code of international penal law. The fact that the Law Commission has not as yet made specific recommendations or that the General Assembly has not adopted such a code, does not mean that there is a vacuum in the field of international criminal law.

International law is developed not only by precedent and growth very much like our common law. After the Nuernberg and Tokyo precedents, there can be no doubt that international law has reached the stage where it is generally accepted that it is a crime against mankind to initiate a war of aggression or to participate in "waging" such war.

The idea of an international criminal court is not new. It was considered at various stages by the League of Nations and by the United Nations. In fact, just a few weeks before the start of the Korean aggression, the International Law Commission of the United Nations meeting at Geneva, voted to recommend to the General Assembly that it was both desirable and possible to set up an international criminal court. It was of the opinion, however, that such a criminal court should not be a branch of the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

WHILE the Soviet delegate "walked out" of the meetings of the International Law Commission, it is interesting to note that in 1937, under the League of Nations, the Soviet government signed a convention for setting up an international penal court. The jurisdiction of the court, however was to be limited to cases of terrorism.

In the light of this background, along with Soviet participation in the Nuernberg trials, it can safely be said that a declaration by the United Nations at this time that it contemplates setting up an international criminal tribunal to try offenders for participating in the "waging" of aggressive wars, as well as for participating in its planning, preparation and initiation, would not offend even Soviet legal and moral standards.

Such a declaration, moreover, would meet the criticism that was leveled at Nuernberg, that it was a special temporary tribunal set up to try only the particular crimes of the Axis. We would now have laid the groundwork for setting up a permanent criminal tribunal with jurisdiction generally over a particular type of crime involving the peace and security of mankind. There is time to extend its jurisdiction to other crimes as the situation may arise.

THERE would be a special impact on the Soviet mind, by a declaration at this time by the United Nations, to the effect that all persons holding high position who participate in the waging of the aggressive war and unlawful invasion of Southern Korea, will be held responsible before an international criminal tribunal for violation of international law; that, as to persons responsible for participating in the planning, preparation and initiation of the aggression against South Korea, their efforts to comply with the "cease and desist" order of the Security Council will be taken into account in mitigation of their sentences; that further participation in the waging of the war of aggression and unlawful invasion of South Korea, will be considered not only as a separate and distinct crime, but as aggravating the initial crime.

We ought to learn from our experiences of World War II. We have now international machinery which we did not have when the Nuernberg trials took place. We ought to utilize that international authority now in the light of our past experience and furnish the moral and legal support to the police action of the United Nations which is necessary to bring it to a swift succesful conclusion.

Menzies Given Merit Award, Offers Troops

Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies of Australia said last night his country would not be "neutral in a world struggle for human freedom."

The big dynamic statesman from Down Under, in a talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System network, said one purpose of his visit to Washington was to discuss with United States officials the best way for Australia to employ ground forces in the Korean fighting.

President Truman, at a luncheon at Blair House earlier, awarded Prime Minister Menzies the Legion of Merit, degree of Chief Commander, for "exceptionally meritorious service" during World War II and since.

A Toast to Unity

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, who attended the luncheon, said the President and Prime Minister toasted each other to the fact that "we are together in this (Korean) war."

Menzies indicated a statement concerning his conferences here will be issued next week.

Menzies, in his broadcast last night, expressed pride that Australia, with eight million population, acted instantly to back up the United States in Korea by placing under American command "our crack fighter squadron of the Royal Australian Air Force, and certain ships of the Royal Australian Navy."

Recalling that the American people "were our powerful and unforgettable allies, our friends and deliverers" in World War II, Menzies went on to say:

Will Be Prepared

"We have decided to be prepared for the future. The Australian Government, which was elected only just over six months ago, has already announced its plans for the introduction of national service training on a compulsory basis."

Naval and air forces would be strengthened, he said, and likewise the means of supplying them.

"There need be no idea anywhere that Australia will be neutral in a world struggle for human freedom . . ." he added. "The more ready we are, the smaller is the risk of world war. There can be no strong foreign policy without a strong and effective defense policy."

Stockpiling To Be Speeded

activation of these 83 ships will be financed out of appropriations of the Department of Defense. The 18 million dollars requested today will finance repairs to additional ships in order to place them in a state of readiness.

"The two programs are expected to place in the shipyards about 25 million dollars of repair work on the reserve fleet.

"The stockpiling funds will be used to accelerate the purchase of strategic and critical materials, taking into account essential industrial and expanded military requirements. Sufficient flexibility is provided for the purchase, within the prevailing stockpile objectives, of materials which now cannot be scheduled definitely but which may become available during the year. The estimate includes six million dollars for the reactivation of aluminum facilities.

"Today's request is in addition to the 500 million dollars of new obligational authority for the stockpiling program which the President recommended in the 1951 budget. The 1951 requests, if approved by the Congress, plus authorizations approved in prior years, would make a total of $2,635,000,000 of financing provided for the stockpile program since the end of the war. In addition, a total of 865 million dollars in materials has been or will be acquired through transfers from the prewar stockpile, war surplus, and the ECA."

Baruch Plan Gains in Senate; Close Vote Now Seems Certain

flatly to those prevailing June 25, he suggested the last normal month before the emergency, May 25 to June 25, be used as a base period.

"As to the timing when these powers should be put into execution, in whole or in part, I would leave that to the President, even as the (President's) bill does . . ." Baruch added.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said he will prepare his own version of the "all-out" control plan over the weekend and offer it as a Banking Committee amendment to the President's bill.

Taft "Absolutely Opposed"

Sparkman said support of the amendment is "growing" in the Senate despite President Truman's insistence there is no need now for a ceiling on prices and wages. clined to be quoted, said he thought there already are five firm votes in the 13-member Banking unit and a sixth "won't resist it." This informant said it wouldn't surprise him if a majority is mustered by Monday.

The Baruch proposals missed clearing the House Banking Committee Thursday by a one-vote margin and some House pollsters gave it an even chance of being added to the President's bill on the House floor.

However, a sharp split developed in Republican support of the across-the-board plan. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who will testify in closed session before the Senate Banking group Monday, said he is "absolutely opposed" to the Baruch plan.

Postponement of a scheduled Saturday meeting of the Banking Committee, called to rush consideration of the President's bill, was a strategic victory for Sparkman, leading Senate exponent of the Baruch plan.

Sparkman moved the recess, saying he needed the time to draft Baruch's ideas in amendment form for presentation to the committee on Monday. His motion carried 4 to 2. Those voting said it was not a real test of Baruch sentiment, however, since some Republicans voting wanted time to draft their own minority amendments.

The recess came during some hot argument after the committee had approved minor modifications in the preamble and in Titles I and II of the President's bill.

Chairman Maybank talked by telephone with Baruch during a luncheon recess of the committee. Maybank told the committee Baruch said it was "imperative" the President's bill be enacted promptly, with additional standby power for Mr. Truman to invoke price, rent, wage controls and rationing. Maybank relayed this information to reporters and later released the Baruch letter.

In his follow-up letter to Maybank, Baruch stressed his belief that the limited control bill "will not prevent further price rises. He said prices must be controlled "as an integral part of any priority system."

Baruch described priorities and price controls as "Siamese twins."

"They must go together," he said. "If priorities are necessary, then automatically price control becomes necessary. If demands are sufficiently large to justify the use of priorities, then they price controls."

In drafting his own interpretation of the Baruch amendment, Sparkman indicated he would give the President discretionary authority to invoke wage, rent and rationing controls. He said he now favored a directed roll back in prices, however.

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday voted these modifications into the President's bill before it took its sudden recess:

An amendment to the preamble saying it is the "intention of Congress" that the President use proposed control powers "within the framework as far as practicable of the American system of competitive enterprise."

Another amendment specifically excluded farms from the definition of "facilities" the President would be empowered to requisition.

A provision, lifted from World War II war powers legislation, saying the requisitioning power could be used only after "all other means of obtaining use of such property for the defense of the United States on fair and reasonable terms have been exhausted."

Minister Rankin Sent to Formosa; Heads Delegation

The United States has ordered Minister Karl L. Rankin transferred from Hongkong to Taipei, to serve as top American representative with the government of Nationalist China.

Taipei, on the island of Formosa, is the Nationalist capital.

Rankin will relieve Robert C. Strong, who holds the lower rank of embassy first secretary, as chief of the United States delegation. Strong is returning to this country on leave.

The State Department in announcing the shift said it is "routine" although the result is to place a higher-ranking diplomat in the Taipei post. Although serving as Consul General at Hongkong. Rankin holds the rank of Minister i nthe diplomatic service.

Reporters were told by press officer Michael H. McDermott that the transfer does not reflect a change of the American attitude toward Nationalist China, and "doesn't reflect on strong either." Strong's leave is long overdue, McDermott said.

3 Area Collegians Become Officers At Fort Meade

A Washington man and two Virginians received commissions as second lieutenants in the Army at Fort Meade, Md., yesterday.

They are Robert L. Toye, 1817 Sudbury rd. nw., a graduate of Virginia Polytech; Hary H. Collier, 1608 N. Queen st., Arlington, a graduate of Georgetown University; and Robert N. Alexander of Richmond, a graduate of Howard University.

All three were commissioned after topping off their college military courses with six weeks of field training at Fort Meade.

Capt. Hogan Takes Command at Naval Medical School

Captain Bartholomew W. Hogan, Navy Medical Corps officer yesterday assumed command of the United States Naval Medical School at the Bethesda Medical Center.

Capt. Hogan

He is 22d medical officer to command the school since it was established in 1920. He succeeds Capt. J. L. Enyart, who now becomes executive officer of the school.

Captain Hogan was commanding officer of the Mare Island (Calif.) Naval Hospital prior to his present assignment. During World War II he was awarded the Silver Star and the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for conspicuous gallantry while serving as senior medical officer aboard the USS Wasp.

A native of West Quincy, Mass., Captain Hogan is a 1925 graduate of Tufts College Medical School.

Senate Told To Expect Recesses Only

Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) put the Senate on notice yesterday that Congress can expect only three-day recesses from the Capitol when it gets its work done.

Even then, Lucas said, legislators should be subject to momentary recall. If the need arises, Senators ought to be able to return to Washington in 24 to 48 hours from anywhere in the United States, he said.

Lucas practically wrote off any sine die adjournment in a speech appealing to the Senate to speed consideration of the long-pending omnibus appropriation bill so emergency control legislation can be called up next week.

Congress will "stay here" until all the emergency and regularly slated business is cleaned up and then will take only limited leave, he told the Senate.

Following Lucas' speech, Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) asked if the special committe on Capitol remodeling should not postpone plans to complete House and Senate renovation this session. Lucas agreed that it should.

Last summer contractors built new House and Senate ceilings and redecorated the galleries. They were waiting for Congress to leave town to remodel the lower half of both chambers.

Lucas indicated Senators were unwilling to meet temporarily in the old Supreme Court chamber, where they huddled last summer, to make room for the contractors.

National Guard Asks U. S. About Home Defenses

The National Guard Association called on the Government yesterday to say what kind of military forces it wants the States to organize for internal security when the National Guard enters Federal service.

The association made public a report by its special committee on civil defense and internal security, which said:

"The Federal Government has given the States neither the desired supervision and coordination nor any indication of the material support it will provide."

If each of the States prepares its own civil defense plan without Federal supervision, the committee said, the result could be not only confusion but chaos.

"A war emergency will not recognize State boundaries," the report added.

Investigators to Eye Voting In Tennessee GOP Primary

By the United Press

The House Campaign Expenditures Committee announced yesterday it found irregularities in a Tennessee congressional primary campaign and will send investigators to check the election Thursday.

It said the irregularities involved the race of Representative John Jennings, jr. (R., Tenn.) for renomination from the Second Congressional District but that it was unable to establish whether they were deliberate or a result of carelessness.

Jennings charged the Republican State Committee, in parceling out representation on county primary boards, failed to appoint persons who would protect his interests. The boards appoint the primary election officials.

A campaign expenditures subcommittee held hearings in Knoxville last Friday and Saturday.

Month's Farm Price Rise Greatest in Over Three Years

Prices for farm products—food and fiber—went up more between June 15 and July 15 than in any similar period since March, 1947, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday.

The Index of Prices Received by Farmers stood at 263 on July 15—the highest in 18 months. (That means that the farm commodities costing $1 in the base period, 1910 to 1914, now cost $2.63).

The items making the sharpest jump were hogs, cotton and eggs. Smaller increases were registered for wheat, rice, corn, soybeans, cattle, calves and chickens.

(BAE in another report said that the young chicken crop is only 670 million—10 percent less than last year and 14 percent under the 1939-48 average. Maryland's chickens this year number 6,336,000 against 6,887,000 last year; Virginia's 11,880,000 against 13,200,000; West Virginia's 5,355,000 against 5,300,000 last year and Delaware's 1,991,000 against 2,164,000.)

Korean Stereotypes

By Marquis Childs

Unfair Criticism Of Rhee Forces

A NUMBER of letters that have come to me indicate confusion on the question of North Korean aggressiveness vs. South Korean resistance or the lack of it. Americans are dismayed because "their side" had done so well and "our side" so poorly.

Childs

A stereotype is ready at hand to explain it. This piece of rubber-stamp thinking goes more or less as follows:

The North Korean armies are eager to fight because they are fighting for a government that gave them something to fight for—land reforms, higher standards of living. By contrast the South Korean government was run by reactionaries out of the past who were unwilling to make concessions to democratic self-government.

That stereotype owes a great deal to years of Communist propaganda. This propaganda has sought to make it appear that the Western democracies were decadent and helpless while communism was a dynamic force that must inevitably triumph. The extent to which that propaganda has seeped into peoples' minds is shown by the readiness of many to accept the rubber stamp on Korea.

The truth is always so much more complicated than any propaganda line. And that goes double or triple for this nasty business in Korea.

It should be said, first of all, that the South Korean army, in spite of almost overwhelming handicaps and appalling initial reverses, is giving a much better account of itself than most American newspaper readers are aware of. That is chiefly because American war correspondents assume that American readers are interested almost solely in what American troops are doing. But military reports to the Pentagon indicate that at one point recently the South Koreans were holding three to four times as much of the line as were American forces.

EQUALLY noteworthy is the fact that the government of the South Korean Republic seems to have held together even though it has been driven from town to town southward down the peninsula. Logically one might have expected utter breakdown, chaos and perhaps major defections to the enemy.

After centuries of feudalism, and more than 40 years of oppressive Japanese rule, the Koreans were very new to the concept of democratic self-government. Add to this the lack of knowledge of American military commanders who occupied the country south of the thirty-eighth parallel in 1945, and who may have made initial mistakes.

The wonder is not that the government of crabbed old Syngman Rhee had faults and weaknesses. The wonder is that South Korea could hold a free election on May 30 of thi year: an election which showed heavy losses for the pro-government and opposition parties, and significent gains for the "middle-of-the-roaders." After all, we in this country have been in the business of self-government for 150 years or more, and I think there would be few to argue that we have achieved perfection.

Another factor too often overlooked is that everything that happened in South Korea happened in a goldfish bowl. The mistakes, the fumbles, the false starts, everything was reported to both the Communist and non-Communist halves of the world.

IN CONTRAST North Korea was sealed away even from a commission of the United Nations. All that came out was propaganda. But we know very well that what went on in North Korea was not the trial and error method of democracy.

It was a completely hard-boiled operation conducted under the cloak of a wholly deceptive propaganda using words such as "peace" and "democracy" that the West takes on faith. A fighting force was built up with all the techniques of indoctrination, intimidation, bribe and reward, threat and reprisal. Then, this force was equipped with the modern weapons of aggression.

On the score of trying to help Asian peoples to self-government the efforts of this country have been pretty good since the end of World War II. American influence may have been the decisive factor in gaining independence for Indonesia without a long, bloody and destructive struggle. At any rate the Dutch blame the United States for a step for which, as the Dutch see it, the Indonesians were not prepared.

The method of communism in an area such as North Korea is brute, ruthless, totalitarian—a gangster operation conducted behind a screen of propaganda. The method of democracy is slow and often painful. The United States may be criticized for having tried to introduce too abruptly the difficult tenets of democracy where peoples had lived so long in colonialism. But it is only through this slow and painful process that true independence and freedom can ever be achieved.

Pepco Asks Increase in Rates

Under the proposed scale this would be increased to $3.65.

The greatest increases asked by Pepco are in rates paid by the Capital Transit Co. and those paid by the District government for street lighting.

The proposed rates would increase Capital Transit's annual electricity bill by 70.7 percent or $661,000, and the cost of street lighting by 59.8 percent or $710,000. The petition said in effect that neither of these consumers is pulling its weight in the total rate structure.

Such an increase to Captail Transit would take away more than one third of the additional annual revenue the PUC estimated it had provided in a fare increase granted CTC last month. A Capital Transit official said last night that the requested increase would have "a tremendous impact" on the company's earnings. He would not speculate on whether the company would seek an immediate fare increase.

Pepco President A. G. Neal said the added revenue is needed for continuation of the company's eight-year 128-million-dollar expansion program started in 1947.

He said present rates will not enable the company to get the needed funds and to protect the investment of our 40,000 stockholders and other security holders."

Pepco earned a quarter of a million dollars above its basic return of 5½ last year. Neal explained that the 27 million dollars spent on construction of the new power plant in Alexandria was not included in these calculations. Its owner, Braddock Light & Power Co., was then a subsidiary of Pepco but has since merged with the utility.

Pepco last received a rate increase in 1948. That was the only increase the company has received in the last 30 years, Neal said. In 18 of the last 25 years the company has either reduced rates or made refunds to customers, he added. As a result of these reductions, he went on, electricity rates with the requested increase would be lower than they were in 1940.

Asks Zone Consolidation

In its request to the Maryland commission, Pepco asked that the rural and suburban rate zones be consolidated. Rural consumers now pay higher rates than those living in the suburbs of Washington.

Actual effect of the consolidation would be to reduce the monthly bill of the average rural residential consumer. He now pays $6.57 for 222 kilowatt hours. The suburban user pays $6.12 for the same amount. If the higher rates are granted and the zones consolidated, both would pay $6.50.

Neal said the company wants to consolidate the Maryland zones because (1) there are almost no rural communities in the area served by Pepco and (2) it is simpler to administer one zone than two.

Residents of Viers Mill Village, Wheaton and Glenmont in Montgomery County may also receive rate reductions. Pepco asked permission to include these suburban areas in the urban zone. If the rate and consolidation requests were granted, present residential rates of $6.12 for 222 kwh. would be reduced to $5.11.

Average increases asked in commercial rates in the District, Maryland and Virginia were 5.6 percent for low voltage consumers and 10.6 percent for high voltage consumers.

The PUC has not yet set a date for hearings on the request.

Air Commuter Leases Roof Space, Saves Half-Hour

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—A 32-year-old commuter read his newspaper more thoroughly after breakfast this morning, then leisurely flew to work in his helicopter.

Twenty minutes after leaving his home in the swank suburb of Lake Forest, Philip D. Armour jr., scion of the meat packing family, landed atop the Merchandise Mart Building. He said he had saved "at least" half an hour.

At the Mart building, where Armour has leased 2000 square feet of roof as a private landing field, the young executive chosses between a 10-minute streetcar ride or a five-minute cab ride to his office on South LaSalle st.

"Of course, I've been flying to work all summer," Armour said. "But I've been landing at Meigs Field on the lake front and it takes me another 15 minutes to get from there to the office."

So yesterday, Armour made a deal with operators of the Mart Building, the world's largest commercial structure.

Zoom in Sales Is Accelerated During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

The buying wave continued at a faster rate in the week ended July 22, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

Dollar volume of Washington department stores was 25 percent heavier than in the same 1949 week, while Nation-wide there was a 46 percent upsurge.

For the four weeks ended July 22, Washington sales were 10 percent higher while the national increase was 22 percent.

Merchants say they have no explanation for the rapid rise in sales other than the common gossip of "scare" buying. Long-memoried persons rushed to buy items that were scarce in the last war. There was a marked rise in volume of house-furnishings sold, especially in large appliances.

All Reserve districts reported big gains in sales. The smallest was 27 percent in the Richmond district, which includes Washington and Baltimore. From Dallas came a report that stores in Texas and parts of Louisiana and New Mexico rang up a 71 percent increase over the corresponding week last year.

One source discounted the sales surge somewhat by pointing out that sales at this time last year were rather slow. He recalled that during July and August in 1949 some stores were selling about 10 percent less than they did in 1948.

The Federal Reserve Board statement on department store sales by districts follows:

Louis Makes it Official— He'll Fight Ezzard Charles

Joe Begins Drills for Sept. Bout

By Gayle Talbot

New York, July 28 (AP).—Joe Louis made it official today.

The former heavyweight champion, now 36 and beset by income tax troubles, notified the International Boxing Club that he is going into training in an attempt to regain the title he surrendered in March, 1948.

His opponent will be Ezzard Charles, the lithe Cincinnati Negro who is recognized in 47 States as the successor to the crown which Louis held for 11 brilliant years.

Barring the unforeseen, Charles and the old warrior whom he idolized as a youngster will meet late in September either at Yankee Stadium here or in one of the Chicago ball parks.

"It all depends," said President Jim Norris of the IBC., "whether we are successful in signing Ray Robinson and Jake LaMotta for a middleweight championship bout. If we do, then I rather think we will send the Louis-Charles fight to Chicago."

Charles is booked to fight Freddie Beshore at Buffalo, N. Y., on August 15, but Norris and his associates are confident he will hurdle that one, especially now that he faces the prospect of the biggest payday of his ring career.

If Beshore should upset Charles, the IBC officials would huddle the next day to decide what to do. A sensational Beshore victory might earn him a Louis bout. However, it is more likely that Joe would prefer to meet Lee Savold, recognized as world heavyweight champ in Britain. Savold still is in England.

"It would be up to Louis," said Al Weill, IBC matchmaker.

Louis, in a telephone conversation with Norris today, declared he will enter the ring in good shape and added that he expected 'to be the first retired heavyweight champion to regain the title."

Charles, in Cincinnati, said "I welcome the opportunity to settle in the minds of boxing fans wether I am the undisputed champion. It's an opportunity for me to determine for myself whether I have been wasting my time in boxing for the last 10 years."

Louis told Norris he was motoring to West Baden, Ind., today to begin preliminary training. He expects to lumber up and down the hills around that resort city until about August 24, and then to transfer to Pompton Lakes, N. J., for the final, serious phase of his workouts.

Joe Expects to Weigh 212

Although the old Brown Bomber has not fought seriously since he knocked out Joe Walcott in June, 1948, in the last defense of his title, Norris hasn't a doubt that Joe will be able to notch around 212 pounds for Charles.

Louis, as a matter of fact, hasn't let himself get too badly out of shape. Ever since his retirement he has been boxing exhibitions by the dozen, some of them over the 10-round route. He only recently completed a tour with a circus in which he exhibited his skill at each performance.

He pointed out to Norris today that he proved last December he still could punch by knocking out Pat Valentino, a fairly prime heavyweight, in eight rounds at Chicago. By coincidence, Charles also had stiffened Valentino in eight heats in an earlier bout on the Coast.

5 Heavyweights Have Failed to Regain Title

New York, July 28 (AP).—Joe Louis said today he hoped to become the first retired heavyweight champion to regain the title. Five heavyweight champions before him tried it and all failed. They are, giving year of attempt and result of bout:

James J. Corbett, 1900, knocked out in 23d round; 1903, knocked out in 10th round.

Bob Fitzsimmons, 1901, knocked out in eighth round.

Jack Dempsey, 1927, lost decision in 15 rounds.

Reportedly Owes $200,000

Louis Says 1946-47 Tax Debt Forces Him to Fight Again

NEW YORK, July 28 (AP).—Joe Louis, whose difficulties with tax authorities have been a matter of common knowledge, said today that his comeback attempt was dictated by necessity.

"I have decided to fight because of a large and unexpected tax assessment for the years 1946-47 that has just been levied," he told Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club.

"My returns for those years were prepared by certified public accountants. They took large deductions for me that have been disallowed. As a result, I was placed in the 90 percent bracket. While the exact amount of the tax has not been finally fixed, it is going to be large. Every citizen should pay his taxes to support our Government, and I certainly want to pay mine."

Joe's account with Uncle Sam is reliably reported to be in the neighborhood of $200,000. He has had an emissary in Washington trying to arrange some sort of package deal whereby the Government will agree to take his end of the purse against Charles and call it even, but so far with no success.

"Whether a deal is made or not, Joe still will fight Charles," his friends said. "They certainly can't forbid him to fight."

Louis, in announcing his plans, pointed out that he fought two championship bouts against Buddy Baer and Abe Simon for Army and Navy relief during the war, donating his end of $83,000.

THOSE INCOME TAX BLUES—Joe Louis, retired heavyweight champion, announced yesterday he will try to regain his title because he needs the money to pay back income taxes

Jansen Stops Cards, 8-3, Wins His 11th

New York, July 28 (AP).—Larry Jansen pitched the New York Giants to their eighth straight victory tonight as he turned back the St. Louis Cardinals, 8-3, for his eleventh victory. The setback dumped the second-place Cards two and one half games behind the league-leading Philadelphia Phils.

Al Brazle started for the Cardinals and was driven from the mound in the sixth when the Giants sewed up the decision with a four-run rally.

Blackwell Finally Licks Braves, 8-5

Boston, July 28 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds supported Ewell (The Whip) Blackwell with an 11-hit attack tonight as he gained his first 1950 pitching victory over the Boston Braves, 8-5, tonight before a 13,505 gathering.

Blackwell had a shutout until the eighth inning when Earl Torgeson sparked a four-run rally with a three-run homer.

Cubs Smash Bums, 12-5; Pafko Homers Twice

Brooklyn, July 29 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs ended a seven game losing streak by smashing the Brooklyn Dodgers, 12-5, in a game that was held up for well over an hour because of rain and did not end until 12:23 A.M. (EST). Andy Pafko led the Cub attack with a pair of home runs, his 20th and 21st of the season.

Phils Beat Pirates for 5th in Row

Philadelphia, July 28 (AP).—The league-leading Philadelphia Phillies made three hits good for three runs in the third inning tonight and went on to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-1, for their fifth straight victory.

Rookie Bob Miller chalked up his ninth pitching triumph against two setbacks as the Phils finally beat Bill MacDonald after bowing four times to him.

Miller was touched for eight hits, the same number the Phils got off MacDonald and Vic Lombardi, but the big rookie righthander was tough in the pinches. He left ten Pirates stranded on the bases.

The Phils scored their first three runs with the aid of sloppy Pirate playing. Mike Goliat singled and when Miller bunted Danny Murtaugh dropped MacDonald's peg. Eddie Waitkus doubled, scoring Goliat. Miller also counted when Richie Ashburn rolled to Murtaugh. Del Ennis singled Waitkus home.

5 Hurt, 1 Seriously, In Roof Collapse At Detroit

Detroit, July 28 (AP).—Five persons were reported injured, one seriously, tonight when a portion of the grandstand roof collapsed just as the Philadelphia-Detroit game ended at Briggs Stadium.

Detroit Tiger officials said names of the injured were not available immediately. They said the part that fell was a heavy piece of steel which toppled into the upper deck of the grandstand as some 200 spectators screamed and scrambled for safety.

Students Make Own Choices

3 Central Coaches Shifted, Jankowski Goes to Eastern

Three Central High School coaches have been shifted to other schools effective this fall, it was announced yesterday.

The shifts involve:

1. John (Jan) Jankowski, who goes to Eastern,

2. Lou Chacos, who goes to Roosevelt or Coolidge, and,

3. Alfred (Doc) Collins, who goes to Wilson.

A fourth coach, Zeke Laubas, who handled swimming at Central, on a temporary basis, has been released.

Central has been turned over to Negroes this fall and will be renamed Cardozo High.

Jankowski was the top high school football coach in the area until he accepted a similar position at Catholic University last year. It remains for John Paul Collins, Eastern principal, to determine whether Jankowski will have to give up his C.U. job and handle football chores at Eastern. Jankowski coached baseball at Central this past season.

There is some confusion over the transfer of Chacos, who coached football at Central. One school official said he had been switched to Roosevelt while another named Coolidge as Chacos' next spot. Chacos had previously expressed a desire to move to Wilson, since it is nearer his Bethesda home. He added that he "wouldn't mind going to Coolidge" but said he hasn't received any transfer notice yet.

The Wilson capacity of Collins, who handled track at Central, is also doubtful since Wilson has a full athletic staff. Wilson Principal John F. Brougher said last night that "we're delighted to have him but we don't know yet where he will serve. We haven't had time to talk it over."

Central's athletes are free to attend the school of their own choosing. This would allow them to follow their coaches, but it is felt that they will attend that school nearest their homes.

Tigers' Lead Cut to ½ Game As A's Win, 7-6

Detroit, July 28 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics chopped the Detroit Tigers' American League lead to half a game tonight as they jumped into a five-run lead and hung on to beat the Tigers, 7 to 6.

Vic Wertz smashed his 17th and 18th homers and a double to lead a Tiger counter-attack that fell just short in the ninth inning as Hoot Evers hit into a game-ending double play with the bases loaded.

Fowler Gives Up, Leaves Athletics

Detroit, July 28 (AP).—Pitcher Dick Fowler, plagued by bursitis, was headed for home today, apparently lost to the Philadelphia Athletics for the remainder of the season.

Once the ace of the A's mound staff, the 29-year-old Fowler left the club yesterday after a brief conference with Connie Mack. The night before he had absorbed his fifth defeat, at the hands of the Cleveland Indians who banged out 13 hits and 6 runs in eight innings. Dick has won only one game this year.

He has been all but crippled by the pains of bursitis, and yesterday told Connie:

"I can't stand this any longer."

Bauer, Rizzuto Homer; Yanks Nip Chisox, 4-1

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Hank Bauer and Phil Rizzuto hit home runs in support of Allie Reynolds' six-hit pitching for his ninth win as the New York Yankees defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-1, before 33,058 tonight.

The victory enabled the New Yorkers to pull within a half game of first-place Detroit as the Tigers lost to Philadelphia.

Bill Wight dueled Reynolds even for five innings before the Yankees broke loose. After Gene Woodling fanned for the first out in the sixth, Rizzuto drew Wight's first walk. Bauer followed with his eighth homer, a drive into the left field lower deck which enabled Hank to score behind Rizzuto.

Rizzuto opened the eighth with this third round tripper, another drive into the left field lower seats. The Yankees pounded Wight for four more straight singles, but had to settle for only one run during this spurt as Dave Philley's fine throw cut Bauer down trying for third.

Howie Judson relieved Wight, and silenced the Yankees without further trouble.

Tribe Shows Boston No Mercy, 13-1

Cleveland, July 28 (AP).—Al Rosen smacked out his twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth home runs tonight as the Cleveland Indians belted Boston, 13 to 1.

Larry Doby, Joe Gordon and Luke Easter also got four-base hits for Cleveland.

Early Wynn, the winning pitcher allowed the Red Sox only five hits.

Rosen's two blows put him in the lead in the major league four-base hit derby, one round trip ahead of Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner.

Wynn, in winning his 10th game, had a shutout with two outs in the ninth. Then Tom Wright singled, scoring Vern Stephens, who had doubled.

Three of the Indian homers came in succession in the eighth inning, tieing a major league record which had been performed 25 times before. Doby, Rosen and Easter got the hits off the pitching of Boston's rookie, Dick Littlefield.

Rosen's other homer was in the first, after Dale Mitchell had singled and Lou Boudreau had been walked by Maurice McDermott, the first of three Red Sox pitchers. McDermott was the loser.

Gordon's came with one on in the third.

Winning Run Scored Off Harris in Relief Role

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

St. Louis, July 28.—Ken Wood's single with two outs in the last of the ninth scored Don Lenhardt from second base and gave the Browns a 5-4 victory over the Nats tonight.

The winning hit came off Relief Pitcher Mickey Harris, who absorbed his fourth loss against four victories.

Harris pitched himself into the fatal jam in the ninth by walking Pitcher Jack Bruner and Don Lenhardt before there was anybody out. Browns' Manager Zack Taylor sent in Jim Delsing to run for Bruner and Ned Garver, a pitcher, to pinch-hit for Dick Kokos.

After failing twice to lay down a sacrifice bunt, Garver grounded to Yost who stepped on third foreing Delsing, and Yost's throw to first doubled up Garver.

With Lenhardt on second and two down, Harris walked Sherman Lollar intentionally, and worked the count to 2-2 on Wood. Wood then smacked a curve into left-center for a hit just beyond the clutch of Gil Coan.

Sievers Drives in Two Runs

With about 2500 customers egging them on, the Browns quickly got to Kuzava for a pair of runs in the first inning. The big blow was Roy Sievers' long double to right center which sent Don Lenhardt, who walked, and Sherm Lollar, who singled, scampering across the plate.

Dorish kept the Nats under his thumb for two innings, but in the third they got one of the runs back on Mickey Grasso's single to left, an infield out, and Gil Coan's single to right.

They had Dorish on the ropes when, with two out, Noren got his second straight single, and Mickey Vernon drew a walk to fill the bases. Lefty Jack Bruner was warming up for the Browns, but Tom Upton got Dorish out of the mess by throwing out Sam Mele from deep short.

Darish is Batted Out

In the fourth, the Nats disposed of Dorish with two runs to take a 3-2 lead, but again they missed out on a bigger rally by leaving the bases loaded.

Cas Michaels singled and, with one out, Grasso and Kuzava were walked to fill the bases. Eddie Yost's slashing hit to left brought in the two runs, and Dorish was replaced by Southpaw

Marlboro Asks Shift To Nights

Baltimore, July 28 (AP).—Marlboro, newly remodeled half-mile track in southern Maryland, asked the State Racing Commission today for permission to hold its 10-day September meeting under lights.

Marlboro's decision to take to the arcs wasn't surprising. Manager Ed O'Hara has been mulling over the idea for some time. But his decision to carry it out could be interpreted as a sign of the times.

Are the smaller tracks going to have to take to the arcs to survive?

Last year, Marlboro was the only one of the State's five half-mile ovals to show an increase in the betting total. All the rest declined.

On the other hand, harness racing, a comparative newcomer, came into the scene under the arcs and is drawing big crowds and taking the profits.

Decision Due in 10 Days

The State's other short tracks—Hagerstown, Cumberland, Timonium and Bel Air—have indicated they will follow Marlboro's lead if it pays off. They're entirely sympathetic with the idea, but they want the proof first.

Chairman H. Courtenay Jenifer indicated he considered the decision a major step, for he said "we don't want to jump hastily one way or the other, until we're sure we're right." He said the commission will make a decision "sometime within the next week or 10 days."

Night flat racing has been tried at a few tracks across the country, but as yet nothing conclusive has resulted. The Longacres mile track at Seattle is even trying two days of twilight racing beginning at 4:30 p.m. to pull bigger crowds.

Scarborough Downs in Maine also is toying with the idea of going under the lights, and a decision is expected "within the next 24 hours" whether the track shifts from a day to night program.

No Conflict Expected

No conflict between the flat and harness racing tracks is expected, for both are controlled by the Racing Commission.

It is felt that the commission will approve Marlboro's request, for a negative response would leave it open to criticism as favoring the trotters.

Maryland's four harness tracks operate 20-night meetings, while the five half-mile flat ovals are assigned 10 days.

This year, for the first time, the raceways began offering $10,000 purses. It's apparently paying off, for betting at all four tracks is expected to top last year's take easily.

There has been no indication that the State's mile tracks—Pimlico, Havre de Grace, Laurel and Bowie—are thinking seriously of changing over.

Kay Wins With Fine Iron Game

Kay Fletcher, a little fellow from Roosevelt High School with a fine iron game, won the Junior Chamber of Commerce sectional golf tournament yesterday by defeating Billy Wolfe, Devitt Prep, 4 and 3.

Fletcher, 15 years old, will lead a squad of four Washington juniors to the national JCC meet in Ames, Iowa, August 13-19. The others who will make the trip are Wolfe, Billy Ball and Joe O'Brien.

Fletcher shot the Georgetown Prep nine-hole course in 34, one under par, for a 4-up lead over Wolfe in the championship match.

The contest tightened on the second nine but Fletcher, looking somewhat like a small boy beside his 6-foot-2 opponent, made one of the day's finest shots on the thirteenth hole, a par 4 of 285 yards.

Fletcher's tee shot went into the trees while Wolfe uncoiled a drive that nearly reached the green, catching a trap. Fletcher's recovery shot stopped 3 feet from the cup and he holed the putt for a birdie while Wolfe took a 4.

Fletcher closed out the match on the fifteenth.

In the morning semifinals, Wolfe won a 19-hole duel with O'Brien while Fletcher defeated Ball, 3 and 1.

O'Brien, a strapping 16-year-old student at George Washington Prep, stands 6 feet, 3 inches, but he couldn't control his nerves on the eighteenth green. There he could have beaten Wolfe by sinking a 12-inch putt but missed the cup, pulling the ball to one side.

On the extra hole, Wolfe got his par 4 while O'Brien hit his approach shot into a trap and took a 5.

Snead's 66 Takes Lead At Sioux City

Sioux City, Iowa, July 28 (AP).—Sammy Snead stroked a six-under 66 today to shoot into the lead at the halfway point in the 72-hole Sioux City Open Golf Tournament.

Snead, who had opened with a 65 for the par 72 Elmwood course, had a 36-hole total of 131. But golf's biggest money winner was only a shot ahead of Paul O'Leary, the 22-year-old from Bismarck, N. Dak.

Alexander dropped back on a second-round 70 and Burke had a 68 to go with a 65.

Henry Ransom held the fourth position with a 66, 68—134.

Dapper Lloyd Mangrum had the lowest score of the second round. He had a 65 after missing a 4-foot putt on the eighteenth green for his par 4. He clipped four strokes from par with a 31 on the first nine and was eight under par going to the short fourteenth hole.

Mangrum's performance landed him in a four-way tie for sixth place at 136. For company he had Fred Hawkins, El Paso, Tex.; Julius Boros, Mid-Pines, N. C.; and Ed (Porky) Oliver of Seattle.

Snead, tied with Burke for the second spot yesterday, opened his drive with a first-nine 34, 1 under par. He really warmed up to his task on the last nine. He parred 10, birdied 11 and then drove the dogleg 370-yard par-4 twelfth and made his eight-foot putt for a deuce.

Sammy, usually an unsmiling worker, got a big wallop out of his deuce. After slapping out a 350-yard drive from the thirteenth tee, he said, "Those eagles do something for me."

Low 36-hole scores:

Sam Snead	65	66	131
Paul O'Leary	66	66	132
Skip Alexander	63	70	133

Little Storm Takes Lead At Berryville

By Harry de Mawby, jr.

Education Leaders Pledge Support in U. S. Emergency

Representatives of American education, from the grammar school to the college level, yesterday pledged their support to the Nation's effort on the military and economic fronts.

Following a one-day meeting called by the National Council of Chief State School Officers at the National Education Association headquarters, 16th and M sts. nw., spokesmen said the teachers and the physical facilities of public education are "on call" to help in partial or total mobilization.

A concrete result of the meeting of the 34 leaders was the decision to appoint a five-man interim operating committee to work in Washington.

Dr. Pearl A. Wanamaker, of Olympia, Wash., president of the council of school officers, said the committee will be composed of representatives of the council, NEA, American Council on Education, National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards, and the American Vocational Association.

To Work With Agencies

This committee is to keep in close touch with Federal agencies, both to advise them on how the educational institutions can best be protected.

A larger council that will be in a position to speak for all of American education, also is to be formed.

Spokesmen pointed out that a million teachers are available for rationing and draft registration service.

In view of the importance of the educational system, the educators said "the needs of education for teaching personnel, materials for construction and supplies and equipment for classroom use must have No. 2 priority after the needs of the military are met."

Difficulties Recalled

D. Howard A. Dawson, of Washington, executive secretary of the County and Rural Area Superintendents organization, recalled the priority difficulties at the start of the last war when school buses, for example, had difficulty securing tires.

Edward M. Tuttle, of Chicago, executive secretary, National School Boards Association, said: "In September, 1952, we are faced with a tremendous flood of children entering school, as a result of the postwar birth rate. It is of tremendous importance that the schools be given No. 2 priority."

$4 Billions More Arms Aid Believed Topic for Parley

A huge increase in foreign arms aid—reportedly as much as four billion dollars—will be discussed with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders at a White House conference Monday.

President Truman, already firmly on record about the need for stepping up the common security program of non-Communist nations, will lay the projected increase before the lawmakers in the presence of Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Johnson.

It would augment the $1,222,500,000 authorization already approved by Congress to furnish arms during the current fiscal year to the nations abroad.

Word that the increase may total four billion dollars came from several sources, including Republican Senators who conferred for an hour yesterday with John Foster Dulles, Acheson's Republican adviser.

Top Democratic and Republican members of the House and Senate Appropriations, Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees will go to the White House for the conference.

Softball No-Hitter

Ewing Insists Trip Abroad Was 'Fact-Finder'

By The Associated Press

Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing contended today that he took a trip to Europe last winter at Government expense primarily for "fact finding" reasons.

He was up for questioning before the House Lobbying Committee, with Republican members of the committee expressing suspicions that the the real reason for Ewing's trip was to build up sentiment for the Truman Administration's public health program with its compulsory insurance feature.

However, Ewing told the committee that he has a right and a duty to do what he can to influence public opinion in favor of the Administration's program.

He told the committee he has made 33 speeches this year and in many of them has argued in favor of compulsory health insurance. When he talked only about health programs, he put in an expense account, he said. But "if there was one sentence of politics in my speech, I paid my own expenses."

Ewing flew abroad last December 1 and came back by ship January 17. His wife went along with him; so did Earl J. McGrath, commissioner of education, and four other Federal Security Agency officials. Ewing said his wife's expenses were paid "privately." His own expense account for the trip amounted to $1954.94, according to the General Accounting Office. The expenses of the other officials have not been audited by the GAO yet.

Ewing made no attempt to deny that he had tried to prevent a congressional veto of President Truman's plan to set up a Cabinet-rank department of health, education and welfare. The plan was killed by the House, 249 to 71.

Savitt scored a crushing victory over Dr. Arnold Beisser of Santa Ana, Calif., who furnished one of the upsets of the season a few days ago in putting out Herbert Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., the national clay court champion.

The ambidextrous Taylor, who hits all his volleys forehanded, was extended to three sets by Arnold Kotz before triumphing, 8—6, 0—6, 6—3. Kotz tired badly in the final set and could not maintain the pace he set earlier.

In the women's semifinals, Rhoda Thompson, upset winner over second-ranked Ann Fennessey in the quarterfinals started out as though she was about to eliminate third-seeded Clara Bias, but Miss Bias rallied to win the two-hour match, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

U. S. Seeks Sugar From Puerto Rico And Virgin Isles

The United States is dickering for another 150,000 tons of sugar from Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and still more from Hawaii, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan announced yesterday.

His announcement followed disclosure Thursday that this country has arranged to take all the sugar in Cuba—some 600,000 tons—if needed to assure adequate supplies and keep prices stable.

The new deals would make up to 8,700,000 tons of sugar available for United States consumption—the largest supply in the Nation's history. That means up to 116 pounds could be available for every man, woman and child in the country this year—well above normal consumption.

The Agriculture Department is taking these steps to convince Americans, who have been paying little heed to Government no-hoarding pleas, that they don't need to lay away any of the sweet stuff.

School Plan Is Approved

Maryland and Virginia counties closest to Washington.

These are Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties in Virginia, and in Maryland, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, and Harford Counties.

Both bills, taken together, are designed to do for communities in respect to their schools what the Denham Act did during the last war. Members of the committee said yesterday they believed that experience with the Denham Act operation had enabled them to improve upon the type of legislation for this emergency.

School construction aid will be given to local communities under a highly complex formula.

Roughly the measure divides communities into three categories:

1. Those where school districts have children working and living on Federal property. This includes military personnel.

2. Those where children live on private property but parents are employed on Federal installations.

3. The so-called "bedroom" communities where the parents actually work in the next school district.

seventh with a diving catch of Sievers' sinking liner with the bases loaded. Kuzava had walked Bruner, Lollar and Ken Wood to set the stage for Noren's catch.

The Nats blew another scoring chance in the eighth after Manager Bucky Harris removed Kuzava for a pinch-hitter, Bob Ortiz.

Grasso led off with a walk, and Ortiz also walked. Yost moved them up with a sacrifice. Grasso refused to risk a race for the plate on Coan's deep grounder to first baseman Lenhardt for the second out. Lenhardt got Bruner out of the jam with a nice grab of Noren's bad hopping grounder.

IN SHORT—When Bob Kuzava walked Brownie leadoff batter Don Lenhardt in the first inning, it was only the second pass yielded by Washington pitchers in 26 innings. The other walk was an intentional one by Chico Marrero yesterday. The hurlers who figured in the streak were Jim Pearce, Joe Haynes, Marrero, and Elmer Singleton . . . Mickey Grasso's single in the third was his fifth hit in his last six times at bat . . . In the second game of the series tomorrow afternoon, Sandy Consuegra (4-2) will face the Browns' Cuddles Marshall (1-1) in a battle of right-handers. The four-game set will be concluded with a double-header Sunday.

Fairfax Women Ask For County Manager

Scottish Clan Chief Urges Kin to Unite

New York, July 28 (NYHT).—Sir Charles Hector Fitzroy, the twenty-seventh hereditary chief of Clan MacLean of the Island of Mull, today issued a call to an estimated 50,000 American descendants of this ancient Scottish tribe to organize the clan on a global basis.

Sir Charles, 34, is the lineal heir of "Gillan the Battleax," who founded Clan MacLean about 1100 A.D. Today Gillan has about three million descendants.

"In any event, we have more than the Campbells," Sir Charles added. The Campbells were the ancient foes of the MacLeans in one of Scotland's longest feuds.

Sir Charles became head of the MacLeans on the death of his 102-year-old grandfather in 1936. As chief of clan he lives in the tribal seat in Dowart Castle on the Island of Mull, off Scotland's bleak west coast.

He said all MacLeans, regardless of spelling, and their descendants, are eligible for full membership in Clan MacLean; as well as the Beaths, Beatons, Blacks, Leans, MacBeaths, Bacbheaths, Macbeths, MacIlduys, MacLergains, Macrankins, MacVeaghs, MacVeys, Rankins, MacCormicks, MacFadyens, MacFadzeans, MacGilvras and the Clanachans.

"Gentlemen of other surnames intimately connected with the clan" can become honorary members, he added.

Representatives of the Fairfax League of Women Voters last night tried to convince an overwhelmingly male Fairfax Government Stury Commission that the county should adopt the county manager form of government.

More than 70 county citizens listened as six league heads presented their case before 14 men and one woman on the special commission, appointed by members of the Fairfax Board of Supervisors to study possible changes in the county government.

Mrs. Anne A. Wilkins, a member of the league's county affairs committee argued the case for the county manager form.

Called 'Awkward'

The present "supervisor" form of government in Fairfax is 'unsystematic," "awkward" and is hampering the officials in solving the problems of local government," Mrs. Wilkins said.

On the other hand, the county manager form is "a big business-like setup for the big business of Fairfax County government," she added.

The county manager system, she contended, would give the Board of Supervisors "effective control over the whole county government" and would make the School Board appointed directly by the supervisors and more responsive to the people.

It would provide one unified department to handle assessment of county levies and collection and spending of tax money, Mrs. Wilkins said.

Elected at Large

But the main point the league emphasized was that the county manager proposal would provide for election of the six supervisors, one from each district, by the county at large rather than by individual districts as at present.

A referendum on the county manager issue probably will be held during the November elections, although the date has not yet been set by Fairfax Circuit Court.

The women, headed by Fairfax League president, Mrs. E. A. Macy, gave a lively demonstration to prove their contention that the county manager will not become a dictator, without usurping the rights of the court, the voters and the supervisors.

In addition, Mrs. A. Z. Gardner of McLean, a league member, discussed the advantages of health department administration under the county manager form. Under the present system, the local health department, dependent on the State, is in a "state of paralysis," she said.

During the last half of the hearing the county sheriff, Commonwealth's attorney, and chief of police were interviewed by Columnist David Lawrence, who is chairman of the commission's executive committee.

Police Chief Carl R. McIntosh said a change to the county manager form would put police department appointments in the hands of the manager instead of the Circuit Court judge, as at present. But he expressed no opposition to the county manager form.

Neither Sheriff John E. Taylor nor Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh thought a change to the county manager form would have much effect on their offices.

Last night's session was the second conducted by the executive committee of the 21-member commission to get the viewpoint of county organizations. Further sessions will be held August 1 and August 4 at the county courthouse.

Bandits Force 15 Into Meat Cooler, Flee With $10,000

Detroit, July 28 (U.P.).—Two bandits forced 15 persons into the meat cooler of a supermarket today and coolly walked off with $10,000 cash from the store safe.

The bandits entered the store when a driver opened the building to make an early delivery of rolls and bread. They shoved the driver into the ice box.

But Manager Marcel Lussier arrived later than his employes. As each employe walked into the store, the young bandits brandished their weapons and with soft Southern accents ordered them into the cooler.

Finally, after 14 persons were in the ice box, Lussier arrived and opened the safe. Then, he joined the others in the ice box. A butcher freed them.

Youth at Crossroads

Juvenile Delinquency Is the Burden of Entire Community

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

(Last of a Series)

THE MOST discouraging feature of juvenile delinquency is that the authorities actually do not know how to eliminate it.

But they know that if the inadequacies in every phase of the problem—from prevention through rehabilitation—were eliminated, the extent of child crime would be narrowed.

Perhaps the problem is too complex for a simple answer.

You can build a playground, but there will remain children who will stand on the sidelines because they do not want to play.

You can take each individual case to a psychiatrist, but he cannot always eliminate the problems brought on by a sordid home situation or a slum environment.

Moreover, the Korean crisis is bound to hit the youth of the Nation. During the last war, teen-age prostitution rose alarmingly. What will be the effect of a new war, if it comes, the authorities can only guess.

THERE IS general agreement among the authorities that much work is to be done and much money must be spent. It is not enough for the heads of private and public agencies to be interested, but the community as a whole must realize that it is involved whenever a child slides into the paths of delinquency.

The avenues of approach may be summarized as follows:

1. Juvenile Court must be so conducted as to attract public interest in it and for support of its work. Only then can it expect to get an adequate social welfare system and research staff.

2. Juvenile psychiatry and child guidance clinics must be enlarged and made more readily available for children wherever they reside in the city.

3. Something must be done to increase the "reform" rate of the reformatories, and research is indicated. At all events, psychiatrists should be employed in all of them.

4. The Sponsor Program and related activities should be enlarged.

5. Where playgrounds are needed, build them. Where clubhouses are lacking, equip them. And, perhaps, recreational programs should be better adapted to the child who should play but is emotionally unable to do so.

6. Teachers and parents must be ever on the alert for the problem child.

Perhaps the most pressing need at the moment is restoration of public confidence in the processes of Juvenile Court.

RECENTLY, Judge Edith H. Cockrill said she hoped to appoint the best person available to rebuild her social work department. With this point in mind, she chose as her new head of social work Miss Helaine A. Todd, who has had long experience both here and elsewhere in handling children. She has been employed in both field and administrative capacities with the Board of Public Welfare, has handled cases before the court, and is now getting her doctorate in social work at the University of Pennsylvania.

"I have heard nothing but praise for Miss Todd. I am confident she will do an excellent job," said G. Howland Shaw of the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee.

With Miss Todd's appointment, Judge Cockrill said that there appeared to be no more need for publicity.

How Judge Cockrill expects to get the expanded staff, including a sorely needed research department, is difficult to envision if public support is not coming. How the public can get interested in a court whose publicity has grown out of internal strife the judge has not said.

The Juvenile Court Advisory Committee has recommended that a panel of Government experts make a survey of the court to determine whether changes are advisable.

On this, Judge Cockrill says:

"To undertake a study of the court during a period of reorganization of the social work department would accomplish little. When Miss Todd has assumed her duties and the program and policies of that department have been formulated, we shall call upon a qualified committee to study and evaluate the entire program of the court and make suggestions for its improvement."

At the base of the juvenile's problem, all authorities say, is the family situation. Here improvement is often difficult.

This is borne out by the experience of Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken who, of all officials, is most apt to see delinquent children first. She says:

"IF We could teach parents that they must do at least an average, mediocre job of training their children, we would be on the right track. Maybe the big problem is the uphappy parents who, whether they know it or not, are breeding delinquents because they can deal neither with themselves nor with their problem children."

You can teach parents through child guidance programs in the schools and through clinics conducted either by the Government or by private agencies.

In the schools, begin with the teachers.

"Begin teaching teachers what they must look out for in their pupils. It is easy to recognize the spitballer as a problem, but what about the child who sits in the back row and won't play with the others?" says Captain Milliken.

The school system is willing to tackle this problem and has made a beginning. Immediate steps it envisions are related by Dr. Carl F. Hansen, who says:

"WE have asked the school principals to present a listing of students who in their opinion need parental care, placement in special adjustment centers within the school system or in other centers. We are looking in the direction of establishing a child-guidance center within the school system. The direction indicated is not to have clinics as such but rather to have teams of psychologists who come into the school system to work with the school, the teacher, the parent, and the child."

In the schools, too, children could well be taught normal living and also family responsibility. If these lessons could be kept, we might have better parents.

Between the school and the home there is a gap which the child would normally fill by recreation. There is no doubt that more playgrounds, especially in slum areas, would help.

There are some who believe that better recreational facilities are a key to many of the delinquent's problems.

ONE of the supporters of this view is Gerard Shea of the Board of Public Welfare. He says:

"The vast majority of our inmates have no interest in normal things. Many of them don't even know where Griffith Stadium is and care less. The only outlet such boys have is to steal cars. And I have never known a boy to escape from a detention home while he chased a forward pass."

But that recreation centers are no cure-all is found in this statement of Captain Milliken:

"THAT is one of my pet gripes. A lot of people feel that if you just put up a club or a playground, all the problems of children will be solved. That is not true, because the contrast with his home may make the child feel that the playground and club are just excursions and not part of the 'normal' way of living."

It is that type of child and the one "who doesn't want to play" who would be sent to a child-guidance clinic or to psychiatrists for treatment.

What is the situation in the guidance-treatment field?

First, there is a waiting period of from three to six weeks in the local clinics for the first consultation, and leaders say that only the most serious cases are handled here. This is a paradoxical situation for, the more aggravated the case, the less is the probability of cure.

Particularly in need of a clinic is the Southeast section of Washington. According to Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, head of the District's mental hygiene clinic, such a clinic should be established immediately in Gallinger Hospital.

Not content with allowing its children to wander into delinquency without helping them adequately, the city then places them in institutions where, from a lack of facilities alone, they cannot operate efficiently enough. And it doesn't bother to find out what percentage of delinquents after the "reform" period in the institutions come out to commit crimes anew.

PARTICULARLY shocking is the fact that at the National Training School—the "best" institution of its kind—there is not a full-time psychiatrist available. And Superintendent Harold E. Hegstrom points to other deficiencies.

"We need new buildings, and there should be other facilities to handle the defective delinquent," he says. "And during these hot days what a morale booster it would be to have a swimming pool."

The school is now in a position where it must keep boys who lack the mental capacity to benefit from treatment alongside others who have.

As for the other District detention schools, there is a more serious lack, and their facilities are spread thinly over the city.

"Give us our children's center." Shea pleaded, "and give us a psychiatric team with the in-service program we have begun."

If the sponsor program could be sufficiently enlarged so that each child branded delinquent could find comfort, advice and a decent environment free from the stigma which attaches to the "involved" wayward child, perhaps less backsliding would result on the part of the child.

BUT first and last, the problem of the home situation must be attacked, for it is to the home that the child ultimately returns.

There is a beginning in the Big Brothers, Inc., and in other groups which seek out the child before he can be considered delinquent enough to be sent to reform school.

Only when the statistics on the over-all problems are compiled can there be an answer. The Criminal Justice Association points this out by showing that we have never bothered to answer questions such as the relation of delinquency to housing, to parent-criminals, to playgrounds, to character-building agencies. And there is a host of other questions.

The city has started on the solution to the problem. There are new playgrounds being built and there are plans for other services.

But it has never been emphasized to the public the realization that "agencies" are not enough. It is a problem that must be tackled, city block by city block, and even home by home.

Already authorities here have seen third-generation delinquents. The fourth generation is being reared today.

2 Bandits Sentenced In Stickups

'Pimpleface Gang' Member Sent Up For 3 to 11 Years; 2d Man Gets 7-21

Two men who grew from juvenile delinquents into adult bandits received stern treatment in District Court yesterday for their crimes.

They are Wilmer D. (Cat) Campbell, 22, one of the adult leaders of a group of juveniles called the "Pimpleface Gang," and Andrew Carlos Ware, 28, who has a two-page criminal record beginning in 1936.

In sentencing Campbell to serve 3 to 11 years imprisonment for the $1500 holdup of a labor union, Judge James R. Kirkland pointed to recent reports by the Criminal Justice Association of "vicious juvenile gangs."

Maryland Resident

Campbell, who lived in Defense Heights, Md., was found guilty of going into the Sheet Metals Workers' local at 1017 K st. nw. last March with his gang and taking the money at the point of a gun.

The judge said that Campbell as a juvenile had been sentenced to a Pennsylvania reformatory for burglary, enlisted in the Navy, was convicted of armed robbery, served one year of a five-year term and nine months later was convicted again of larceny and sentenced to serve three years.

It was less than a month later that Campbell came to Washington to pull the union stickup.

Hard to Understand

Judge Kirkland said:

"What this court will never understand is why you people think you can come to Washington to perform your crimes. It is a compact, organized community, the citadel of our Government and of the entire world, and yet you have the idea that it's a pushover. If there is any place better protected than this city, I certainly don't know of it."

The judge then told Campbell, who had earlier refused a lawyer, to sign papers for a new trial and advised him on how to appeal.

In another courtroom, Judge Edward A. Tamm sentenced Ware to serve 7 to 21 years for the $1068 armed holdup of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co. office on April 11, and for shooting at police attempting to apprehend him.

A Washington resident was killed yesterday near Urbana, Md., when the truck he was driving collided with another.

He is William Thomas, 23, of 1246 Florida ave. nw., who was driving a Griffith Consumers truck. He was employed by Foy Watford, a subcontractor.

The other truck operator was James R. Stephens, 42, of Savage, Md., against whom a technical reckless driving charge was placed.

Stephens said he was bound for the M. J. Grove Lime Co. with a load of sand. Thomas' truck was Washington-bound with a load of mortar.

1st District Polio Death Is Boy, 5

Berry Mosler Is Second Casualty For Year in Area; 5 New D. C. Cases

Five-year-old Berry Mosler yesterday became the District's first polio fatality of the year and the second for Greater Washington.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Mosler, jr., of 141 Anacostia rd. se., was admitted to Children's Hospital Thursday where his illness was diagnosed as bulbar polio. He died early yesterday.

Mosler, who is a consulting engineer, said that his son had complained of a slightly stiff neck on Monday and Tuesday, and ran a temperature of 99 and 100. He was taken to Children's for a spinal tap.

Born in Cumberland, Md., the child is survived by his parents and a brother, Henry, 9. He will be buried in Altoona, Pa., on Sunday.

First polio fatality in the Washington area this year was Charles W. Pickens, jr., 7, of 3109 Lancer pl., Hyattsville, who died July 20 at Children's.

Health Department statistics list an earlier fatality, that of Harold Kogod, 12, of 2219 Observatory pl. nw., on July 7, as a 1949 polio death. The youth was stricken last September.

At the same time, six new polio cases were reported in Greater Washington yesterday. Five of the new cases are in the District, bringing the total to 38, as compared with 12 at this time last year. The sixth new case is in Fairfax County, making that area's total 11. For the entire D. C. area, there have been 69 polio cases reported so far this year.

The Washington cases are a 6-year-old boy of the 100 block of Audrey lane, se., admitted July 25; a 16-month-old girl from the 200 block of P st. nw., admitted July 27; a 7-year-old boy from the 5700 block of 26th st. nw., admitted July 27; a 3-year-old boy from the 2900 block of Tunlaw rd. nw., and the Mosler child.

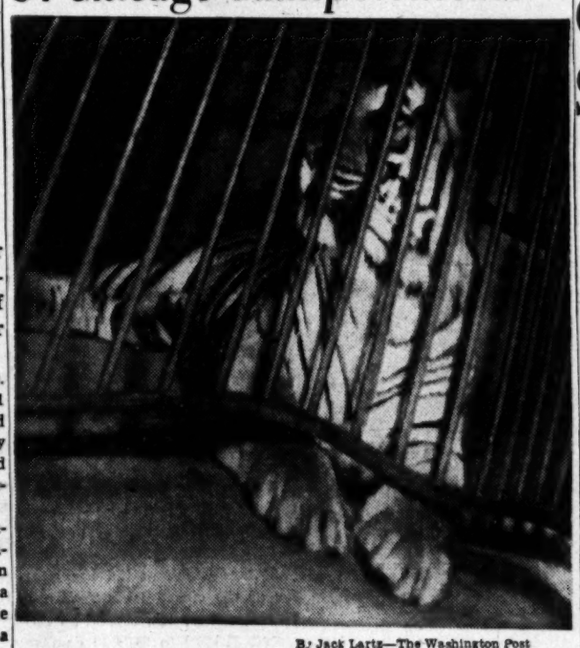
Our Zoo Animals Want No Part Of Chicago Catnip Nonsense



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

CATNIPED CAMERA—The Bengal tiger, one of the subjects exposed to catnip in an experiment conducted at the Zoo yesterday, belched shamefacedly but otherwise showed no reaction that could be recorded by cameramen. The above portrait of the tiger was achieved when the photographer was exposed to catnip during the lengthy session in the lion house

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

They tried out the catnip at the Zoo yesterday. They tried it out on lions, a black leopard, a Bengal tiger, a Sumatran tiger, a jaguar and the laughing hyenas.

There was not much more reaction than you would get from tickling the big cats with a stick.

The hyenas laughed and laughed. But then the hyenas laugh all the time.

The experiment followed a similar one at Chicago's Brookfield Zoo. There the lions, tigers and leopards stood on their heads and otherwise "behaved like overgrown kittens" when catnip was tossed in their cages.

But it's about like she would do when tickled by a stick, said Mike. Big Jim Lion came over to get in the act, rubbing his mane along the bars.

"Maybe it's because they're tame lions—born in captivity," said Doctor Mann. "Let's try it on the black leopard—jungle-born.

The Bengal tiger belched a couple of times. The Sumatran tiger wiggled his ears.

Dr. Mann came up with the day's best crack.

"Maybe," he said, in reference to the Chicago precedent, "it's because they don't want to be copy-cats."

$125 Arlington Holdup Solved In 12 Hours With D. C. Assist

With an assist from an alert Washington policeman, Arlington police yesterday charged two men with a $125 holdup only 12 hours after the offense was committed.

The filling station which was held up by two men yesterday was Burr Heishman's at 1503 Lee hwy., Arlington. Attendant Chester Carroll, 35, of 2412 Lee blvd., Arlington, said the men, armed with a .32 caliber pistol, took his change carrier and some bills about 5 a. m. and fled in a black coupe.

Charged with armed robbery about 5 p. m. were Earl Lafayette Hauffman, 24, and Clyde E. Williams, 18, both of 1216 14th st. nw.

Shortly afterwards, Metropolitan Police Pvt. James F. Smith of No. Seven Precinct, walking his Georgetown beat, saw a black Packard coupe run a stop sign and jotted down its license number.

When he read the lookout for a car of that description later, he notified Arlington police, who contacted the owner. The owner identified two other men who had been out in the car early yesterday.

About 11 a. m., Arlington Detective John Sanders and four Washington detectives found Hauffman and Williams asleep at the 14th st. address and arrested them. Sanders said the missing change carrier and about $58 was found at the address.

Taken to Washington police headquarters, police said, the men were identified in a lineup by at-involved Senator Harry Flood Byrd taken to Arlington and charged. Both men face preliminary hearing in Arlington County Court at 9:30 a. m., Monday.

Byrd's Coupe Stolen

There won't be any Congressional action, but there certainly was a very active police investigation on Capitol Hill yesterday. It (D., Va.). Somebody took his car involved Senator Harry Flood Byrd from in front of the Senate Office Building. It's a 1950 blue Chevrolet coupe with Virginia tag No. 5.

Cashing of Relief Checks in Liquor Stores Investigated

Probe Is Ordered By Welfare Board; Morris Indorsed For Another Term

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

The Board of Public Welfare has started an investigation into the cashing of public assistance checks at liquor stores.

Board members, at their monthly meeting yesterday, voted to request individual case workers to investigate the matter after hearing a report that in May, of the 7290 public assistance checks given out, 428, or 6 percent, were cashed at such stores.

The report was drawn up after the board had received complaints checks were cashed in this way.

Gerard Shea, director of Public Welfare, explained that some checks had second indorsements, indicating they were not cashed at the liquor store by the actual recipients of public assistance.

He also pointed out it is easier to cash checks at liquor stores than at other stores because the former usually keep more cash on hand.

Shea said he did not know what action, if any, can be taken to stop cashing of such checks at liquor stores.

Nominations Approved

Other business taken up by the board yesterday included:

Members approved the nominations of Edgar Morris, chairman; Fred S. Kogod, vice chairman, and A. J. Driscoll, secretary, to continue in their duties another year.

Members approved a regulation making it mandatory that the Board of Public Welfare provide total surgical and medical care for its wards, whether temporary or permanent.

Members decided relatives of these persons who are receiving general public assistance should be reimbursed for medical care, whether the public assistance case is living with them or not.

Mrs. Hartz Wins $800 Per Month

A 48-year-old Washington clubwoman who claims she needs $233 a month for clothing alone was awarded $800 temporary maintenance monthly in District Court yesterday.

She is Mrs. Agnes S. Hartz of 2800 Woodley rd. nw. She claims that her estranged husband, Barge L. Hartz, 57-year-old president of the Colonial Ice Cream Co., deserted her in 1948. She has a limited divorce suit pending.

In awarding the temporary maintenance during the court proceedings, Judge James R. Kirkland said that he was considering at this time only such factors as Mrs. Hartz's recent precarious health, her station in life and the $29,000 yearly income of the husband.

He then noted that her suit, filed through Attorney Lewis H. Shapiro, claimed that she needed $814 for living expenses each month. Included as items were $154 for rent, $100 for maid service and $233 for clothing.

"Some of these items will challenge the attention of the judge who tries this case," said Judge Kirkland.

In his answer, Hartz said that the clothing expense was "impracticable." He said that the $6059 he has been giving her yearly is enough for all her needs.

Iraqui Aide Faces Inquest in Killing

Chamchum Elias Saysi, 41-year-old employe of the Iraq Embassy, will appear today before a District coroner's inquest into the "kitchen knife" murder of the embassy's head janitor.

Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, announced last night that the stocky Saysi was due to arrive in Washington by plane early today. The inquest, he said, is scheduled for 11:30 a. m.

Accompanying Saysi are Detective Sergts. Walter M. Cook and Bernard Crooke of the Homicide Squad, who flew to Detroit Thursday night after police there arrested Saysi, a janitor at the embassy, at the home of a friend.

Saysi was arrested in Detroit six hours after 37-year-old Mahmud Rodaini was found knifed to death in the basement of the Iraq chancery, 2205 Massachusetts ave. The body was discovered at 9:30 a. m. Thursday.

Captain Murray last night confirmed reports from Detroit police that Saysi confessed to the two Washington detectives.

Murray said, however, that he had no details of the reported confession.

The State Department said yesterday that in international law Saysi's status is no different from that of any other person charged with a crime in the District. Washington authorities asked for the ruling.

In Detroit, Saysi cleared the way for his return to Washington by waiving extradition in court. He refused at first to do this.

Rodaini had been stabbed repeatedly in the neck, shoulders and arms, police said. He was on a bloodstained bed in the basement of the chancery.

The Hecht Co. in Silver Spring yesterday afternoon opened a complete lower-priced downstairs store.

Covering an entire floor of 20,000 square feet, the new downstairs store inventory is estimated at $250,000. Special fixtures cost more than $100,000.

The operation required adding two extra floors to accomodate departments moved out of the lower level floor, and to enlarge other facilities. Total cost of the project was estimated at one million dollars.

$25,000 Asked In Gasoline Damage Suit

A $25,000 damage suit against the W. V. & M. Coach Co. (Arnold Lines) has been filed in Arlington Circuit Court in the wake of 1947's "gasoline alley" episode.

Suit was filed recently by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dedera, who claimed that gasoline leaking from Arnold Lines storage tanks forced them to vacate their home at 3929 N. Firth pl. The gas bubbled up in their well and seeped into their house, they claimed.

Source of the gasoline leaks in the vicinity of Fifth and N. Pollard sts. is a mater of controversy, but a geological survey made by the Interior Department called the Arnold tanks the "most likely source."

Before county engineers had finished pumping up the gasoline, more than 10,000 gallons had been tallied. The Dedera suit was the first filed in the episode.

Through their attorney, Oren R. Lewis, the Dederas complained the gas endangered their safety and health and caused them "to suffer and become nauseated and sick as a result of inhaling the gas fumes."

They also had to move their house and garage "two or three blocks" to avoid the bubbling gas, they complained. And they were deprived of the use of the lot from January, 1947 to the end of March, 1948, the suit said.

In its reply, the bus company said it was protected from the suit by the statute of limitations, and also asked the nature and duration of the Dederas' illness, and the cost breakdown of moving the house and garage.

The bus company is represented by the law firm of Jesse, Phillips, Klinge & Kendrick.

Deadline Near For Personal Property Tax

District tax officials yesterday reminded Washington residents that Monday is the deadline for filing personal property tax returns.

Returns must be filed or in the mail by midnight Monday. Persons failing to file on time may be penalized 20 percent of the tax due, according to J. L. Martin, chairman of the board of personal tax appraisers.

Persons who filed last year should have received tax forms by mail, Martin said. Persons who have not filed before may obtain them at Room 215 in the District Building, he said.

Martin said those who want help in preparing their returns should go to Room 215 Monday between 8:15 a. m. and 4:45 p. m.

Salesman Held In Forgeries, Impersonation

A 45-year-old salesman last night was in the Marlboro jail, booked on three counts of forgery involving bad checks and one of impersonating a police officer.

The salesman, Otto H. Gage of 5718 26th pl., Silver Hill, also has used the name of Charles E. Porter, Prince Georges County police said. Gage's bond was set at $11,000.

Gage would pose as a policeman, stop motorists and pretend to write out an arrest ticket, according to Detective John W. Siddall. When offered a bribe, Siddall said, Gage would pocket the money and tear up the ticket.

Maryland State Police Sergeant Wilton T. May is listed on the arrest book in the Marlboro Police Station as the complainant in the impersonation charge.

A hearing for Gage on an impersonation charge sworn to by a private citizen was scheduled in Hyattsville Police Court last Thursday, but was continued until August 4 at Marlboro after Gage telegraphed he could not appear. Then he was free under $700 bond.

The complainant listed on the arrest book at the Hyattsville Police Station is David H. Gellman, of 3706 Bunker Hill rd., Brentwood.

Gage was arrested on the four charges Thursday night, at his home. A hearing on the forgery charges was set for August 10 in Hyattsville and on the impersonation charge August 4 Marlboro.

Police in Washington also have a detainer against Gage on an embezzlement charge in the District.

Members of the Check and Fraud Squad in Washington said he failed to appear in Municipal Court for a hearing last Thursday on the embezzlement charge. He was free under $500 bond, they reported.

Gage was arrested July 11 on a United States Commissioner's warrant, police said. It charged that as a commission salesman for a jewelry firm, he failed to return about $100 worth of jewelry and watches.

Dr. George W. Hoover, 75, who helped write the Food and Drug Act of 1906, died Thursday of a heart attack at his home, 1461 Holly st. nw.

Before the act became law, he served for two years on Wiley's "poison squad," as a sampler of food or drug concoctions believed to be harmful to human beings.

In the course of the next quarter century, Dr. Hoover assisted in revising parts of the law.

In 1929, he resigned as chief of drug controls in the Bureau of Chemistry; and, from that year until his death, was a consultant for private industry on Food and Drug Act problems. His offices were in the Governor Shepherd Apartments, 2121 Virginia ave. nw.

Dr. Goodloe Released on $7500 Bond

Dr. William A. Goodloe, 53, was ordered released from prison yesterday under $7500 bond pending his appeal of an abortion case sentence before the United States Court of Appeals here.

In releasing Dr. Goodloe, the Appeals Court indicated that there were "substantial questions of law" in the case in which the physician received a 28-month to seven-year prison term.

The upper court appeared especially interested in an incident which occurred when the jury was polled by District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff when the verdict was returned.

While 11 jurors said "guilty" the 12th said "not guilty." Upon questioning the juror then indicated he found Goodloe innocent on the first ballot but later changed his mind.

Judge Holtzoff then said that the guilty verdict could stand. Defense Attorney Charles E. Ford argued that the judge should have sent the jury back for more deliberations instead.

Ford also charged that the "racial issue" was brought in by the Government during the trial. Goodloe is a Negro and the complaining witness on whom the operation was performed is white.

Ford claimed, in addition, that a juror was allowed to take notes illegally, and that a bribe charge, a conspiracy charge, and the abortion charge should not have been lumped together during the trial.

In another action, the court took under advisement a bail plea made by Ralph W. Myers, 44-year-old shade salesman, serving a 20-to-60-month term for abortion. James J. Laughlin, his lawyer, charged Trial Judge F. Dickinson Letts instructed the jury improperly.

'Stay-at-Homes' Parties Are Gay

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE chic few who are sticking the summer out at home had a choice of parties yesterday. A reception for the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, jr., was given by Mr. and Mrs. Maple Harl at the Sulgrave Club, while at the same time the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer entertained at the embassy in celebration of Peru's national holiday, Independence Day.

Cocktails, iced coffee, and coffee with ice cream were served at the Sulgrave party. Mrs. Pace received in a navy blue cocktail frock with broad brimmed navy hat, and the hostess was gowned in black marquisette trimmed with taffeta. Among the 200 or more guests who attended were the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Franklin Brannan, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, Senator and Mrs. John L. McClellan, Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Brig. Gen. Robert B. Landry, Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Paul H. Streit.

Garden Is Gorgeous

After being received in the drawing room at the Peruvian Embassy, guests stepped out into the beautiful gardens of Battery Tirell. The lawn was like green velvet and old fashioned flower beds bloomed in every color. Surrounding woodlands gave the fine old estate an air of seclusion and remoteness, despite its location just off Connecticut ave.

The reception started and finished as a garden party. Several discouraged guests hurried for cover when the first drops of rain fell, while others remained in the garden at tables sheltered by colorful umbrellas. The sun was out again suddenly, and the second shower went by unheeded.

Entertainment was provided by the lively trio from Mexico—Lupi, Chico and Pepe Dapena—who've made such a hit here and in Baltimore.

Latin-American Guests

Guests for the most part were from Latin-American countries. The Ambassador of Paraguay and Senora de Boettner were there as well as the Ambassador of Brazil, Mauricio Nabuco; the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen, and the Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Valle.

Others were the Ambassador of Venezuela, Jose Rafael Pocaterra; the Ambassador at Large of Spain and Senora de Lequerica, the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Penaranda, and the Charge d'Affaires of Ecuador and Senora de Moscoso.

The Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer looked rested and sun tanned, having just returned from a visit to California and Lima, Peru.

Senator Claude Pepper and the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Charles G. Ross were among those who attended Bernard Shaw's play, "The Devil's Disciple," at Olney Theater last evening. Others in the audience were Senator and Mrs. Spessard Holland, Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, and Representative and Mrs. Sidney R. Yates.

The First Lady returned to Washington yesterday for a visit of several days. She was met at the Union Station by the President on her return from Independence, Mo. On Sunday Mrs. Truman will visit her daughter, Margaret, in New York. Miss Truman had planned to come to Washington for the weekend, but other arrangements have kept her in New York.

Visitors Here From London

TWO visitors from London, Sir John Hodsoll, Inspector General for Training in the Civil Defense Department, and S. F. Wilkinson, Undersecretary of the Ministry of Health, have been visiting here en route home from Seattle, Wash. Another Englishman, Sir Eric De Normann, who is Deputy Secretary of the Ministry of Works, is also a visitor here.

Sir John and Mr. Wilkinson flew to Seattle July 14 to view civil defense exercises presented by the City of Seattle to a group working on interim civil defense plans, chaired by Washington's Eric Biddle.

Last evening Mr. Biddle entertained at a dinner party at the Metropolitan Club for the three Englishmen who are flying back to London today. In addition to Sir John, Sir Eric and Mr. Wilkinson, the guests were David H. Stowe, administrative assistant to the President; Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, USN, Naval aide to the President; Paul J. Larsen, director of Civil Defense Office, NSRB; Dr. W. Palmer Dearing, deputy surgeon general, Public Health Service, and Henry R. Labouisse, jr., of the State Department.

TRAVEL DEP'T.:

Michal Kwapiszewski, former Counselor of the Polish Embassy, and Mme. Kwapiszewski, who have been on a holiday in Roxbury, Conn., are spending a few days in Spring Lake, N. J., before returning to Washington on Sunday.

Mrs. James Patten, just back from almost a month in South Carolina, expects to leave again next week to motor to New England, where she'll stay until after Labor Day.

Mrs. John H. Purdy is insulating herself against hot weather by heading for Canada for the remainder of the summer.

Roger Taymans, Belgian Counselor, has returned from a two-month vacation abroad. Paul Hubert, Belgian attache, and Mrs. Hubert are leaving sometime in August to return to Belgium.

Girls Nation Delegates Here

98 Outstanding Junior Misses Thrilled By Capital and New Responsibilities

They are the delegates from 48 States and Panama to the Girls Nation meeting at the Mount Vernon Seminary through August 3 under the auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The girls, the brightest junior misses their States have to offer, flocked to Washington to learn first hand just how Congress, the Supreme Court, and even the President works. Then they'll take a swing at managing the Federal Government themselves.

But first and foremost in the minds of each of the vivacious teeners is that visit with President Truman scheduled for Wednesday morning.

"I'm so excited I can't eat, think or do anything," giggled 16-year-old Columba Rudolpha Joerger of Truth or Consequences, N. Mex. "All I can think about is seeing the President."

Take First Train Ride

Columba, like several of the teen-age delegates, took her first train ride when she came to Washington for the convention. The little resort town where she lives acquired its unique name last spring, Columba says, when the Truth or Consequences radio show took it over. "That was real exciting, too," she added.

Blond, blue-eyed Columba is a drum majorette for her high school band and a reporter for the school paper. The school incidentally, has kept the town's former name. It's the Hot Springs School.

With very few exceptions, the girls work for their school papers and magazines and either play in the band or sing in the choir. And most are "A" students. But under the strain of their first trip to Washington and their first chance to see the President, they act just like all other teen-agers would.

As Columba puts it: "I just don't know if I can live!"

The excitement was abated somewhat, however, during the sober opening ceremonies last evening when the National President of the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Norman L. Sheehe of Rockford, Ill., proposed her eight-point program "for patriotic action during the present world crisis."

Advising the girls to take the program home to their mothers to "aid in the unity of American women," she said:

"Write your Congressmen to pass universal military training legislation as an over-all training program;

"Encourage young men to enlist to win the war against communism;

"Pray daily for the success of the United States and the United Nations in opposing the North Korean forces and repelling aggression everywhere;

"Buy Government bonds;

"Buy only what your family needs and so fight the war of inflation at home;

"Build morale to strengthen the home, the State and Nation;

"Talk victory and believe it."

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

After Diet Habits Are Controlled, Keep Right on Shedding Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain

ONE summer can make you slimmer . . . provided you stay with this lightweight pattern of eating. You now have a knack of dodging the high fuel foods, and your appetite is beautifully under control. So if you have more excess pounds to lose, go right along slimming through August.

IDA JEAN KAIN

It will help enormously to think this way . . . "I'm doing fine, and if I stay with the dietary pattern and leave off the fattening trimmings, I can be 12 to 15 pounds lighter by Labor Day—glory be."

For many this will mean your weight problem is licked for good. And since you have been changing your food habits from fattening to protective, keeping at normal weight will be very simple.

That is the beauty of using the science of nutrition and reducing on protective menus. You learn to like eating this way . . . feel so fit and have so much more energy, that there is no real temptation to return to the old, fattening ways of eating.

For the next few weeks be on guard against your particular dietary weakness. Say it's hot breads. They're twice as fattening as other kinds, not only because the tendency is to eat twice as much, but the butter soaks in so fast. Try this the next time you are faced with a hot popover or a homemade roll . . . look squarely at it and say, "Which do I want—that oversized popover or to get along with my slimming and be fit by fall?"

More than one dieter writes that it helps, when tempted, to ask herself that question right out loud. Once voiced, it seems silly to choose a buttered bun and more bulge!

Back this up by thinking, "I haven't broken over yet, and each time I resist toughens my will power." Psychologists claim that the sure way to break a habit is not to permit a single exception until the new habit is in the groove. This doesn't mean you can never enjoy some of your favorite foods . . . you can. Just fix the slimming habit first . . . then you can eat as you please, for you won't please to overeat.

Remember it's the fat trimmings that change summer fare from low-calorie to high, so don't even pick up the cream pitcher when you have fresh berries. Again ask yourself, "Do I want that cream or streamlining?" The choice is yours.

It really is, for you'll hear no more from this dietition until the middle of August. I'm off on vacation (seafood isn't fattening) . . . but I'll be back on my calorie beat before you can miss me.

Pounds Vs. Persistance

It's Mrs. Treglown In Diet Derby, 6 to 3

By Norma Lanum

Mrs. Edward Treglown is the winnah! After 12 days of brisk competition she conquered me in Ida Jean Kain's diet just completed. She lost six pounds to my three.

Not only did she better my efforts, but she even surpassed Miss Kain's expectations. She lost the prescribed six pounds for 12 days after Miss Kain predicted it might have to be a longer diet for her. She didn't know Ruth Treglown very well.

MRS. TREGLOWN . . . the winner!

As for me, I could lose quite easily, according to Miss Kain. In fact, she even advised me not to try to lose too much. "Four or five pounds will be plenty for you to take off," she remarked gaily. "And you'll find it very easy."

She didn't realize then that I have no will power. In fact, I didn't realize it myself until it was too late. I went to the beach over the weekend where there was virtually nothing to eat but hot dogs and soda pop. And on an assignment the other day a photographer bought me an ice cream cone. Needless to say, I just couldn't pass up luxuries like those.

Come to think of it, I guess I did pretty well to get rid of three pounds considering the hazards I was up against. And then I was able to whittle an inch off my waist line and another inch from hips.

But, of course, Ruth Treglown is the champ. She came out of the diet with two inches off of her waistline. "And I'm going to keep on going," she says convincingly.

How to Get a Husband

Men Are Where You Find Them; Go Where They Are

Sixth of 17 articles.

By Cora Carlyle

YOU may as well make up your mind to it—the man you hope to marry will not appear out of the blue. You're not the princess in a fairy tale who can afford to wait for Prince Charming to charge the gates and sweep you off your feet. You're the average American girl whose day is spent at school or home, the office or the factory. Wherever you are should be the happy hunting ground for meeting your eligible young man. He is going to be someone like the man walking down the street right now, dressed in an ordinary suit, made by a nationally advertised firm that promises him he'll look different. Yes, you are surrounded by men all the time but their eligibility as husbands exists not only in their qualifications but in your own receptivity. So throw away the fairy tale picture of your love, woven out of spun sugar and cobwebs. Open your eyes to the men around you and your circle of selection immediately widens.

Meeting men isn't a seasonal business. December may signify Christmas and snow, August swimming and sunburn lotions, but both months are equally favorable for meeting men. The calendar takes on new significance when you realize that every month of the year can be used and has its own special value as a time to meet new men. Men are not like oysters, they always R in season. Nor are they rare like oysters. Believe us, girls, they are everywhere!

Despite the fact that men are ubiquitous, you can't meet them without effort. And why not? Think of the trouble you go to in selecting the right hat and of the investigations you conduct before choosing the new winter coat. Like the hat or the coat, a man doesn't fall into your lap and shopping is necessary to get the best choice.

The obvious sources of meeting men are your home, your friends and your work. You may think you have exhausted these sources. But was your failure due to the idealized conception you had of a man? Were your efforts limited to seasonal spurts for fishing in the sea of matrimony? With a new chart, try these waters again. Then with courage and determination, spread your sails and guide your boat on new courses where the fish are plentiful.

One of the most satisfactory sources for meeting men is your married girl friend. A fine strategic attack can be made from the warmth of a young bride's home. The whole atmosphere there permeates with connubial bliss and the advantages of marriage pierce the most resistive brain. Newlyweds feel that the joys of marriage are their unique discovery. They usually have the zest of Crusaders and want all their friends to embark on a similar adventure. With characteristic zeal, they will consider you a heretic if you don't let them help you get a husband. Don't deny them the pleasure! Your friends, whom we will call Carol and Bill, need spectators for the little drama of their lives. So don't feel that you are intruding on their privacy. They will enjoy the stimulus of your presence as an audience to applaud their happiness.

Don't hesitate to have a frank talk with Carol about yourself. Tell her you think Bill and she are sweet to want to help you find similar happiness. Confess you are just as anxious to find the right man and start a home of your own. This is the propitious moment to show her how she can really help you. It is not unmaidenly to suggest that Bill bring home a possible boy friend; that you'd love to go to the opening dance to the club; or that you'd be glad to make a foursome on the golf links.

Beware of Talking

WARN her not to make the common error of talking too much about you and arousing a bad case of "sales resistance." Everyone knows that men shy away from an invitation that has the earmarks of a well-planned trap. An ounce of subtlety is worth a pound of gushing.

After your married friends have carried out your instructions, do not feel that your role is one of spectator. When Carol invites you for dinner, it may suit your dramatic sense to plan a late and effective entrance but it won't endear you to her. But if you arrive early and fix the hors d'oeuvres or arrange the flowers, her appreciation for these acts will encourage her to help you again.

Apart from the ordinary considerations which one person shows to another, you are dependent on this married couple for future contacts. They will be willing if you don't abuse their friendship and exhaust their patience. You want the many opportunities to meet new men which Carol and Bill can provide. With tact and understanding, you can make yourself a welcome guest in the home of your married girl friend.

From the time your girl friend brought her brother along to play patty cakes with you till the day he swelled the needed throng of the stag line at your college dance, your girl friend filled a need in your life. At this more grown-up stage when you both are working for the title of Mrs. you can mutually profit by making reciprocal trade agreements on the man commodity. This bilateral contract must stipulate the mutual swap of all eligible men with cutthroat competition eliminated and no trade barriers erected.

Any male relative, brother, cousin, uncle is listed for exploitation. You both agree to whisper in brother's or cousin's ear that you need his help; that you and your girl friend want to get married; and that he can help you by bringing his boy friends to the house.

If brother and his friends are not the game playing kind, you and the girl friend can pool your collection of records for a musical evening. Or you can arrange that the Battle of the Baritones be waged in your living room. Most young men enjoy dancing and listening to the latest recordings, or you can tune in on the Make-Believe Ballroom and dance.

Meet Them at Work

DO you work? If you do, have you cultivated the girls at your office? They may have desirable friends or relatives. How about the new receptionist? The charming young man who called for her last Saturday may have been her brother, cousin or uncle.

Besides office friendships, the old ties that you have allowed to lapse should be renewed with a definite purpose in mind. How about that interesting girl you met last summer on your vacation? She was popular and attracted all kinds of men. She's the type of girl who might help you overcome your timidity to try new places. There must be at least a dozen girls whose acquaintanceship or friendship you haven't bothered to keep alive. Courageously pick up the telephone and try to make a date with each and every one of them.

The following story is our pet because it demonstrates that inexorable effort produces results. Miss J., a teacher in a large city school, made up her mind one night that she was finished, through, washed up with being an old maid. With grim determination, she decided to use each and every one of her 96 colleagues as a means of meeting a possible husband. To insure no slip up in accosting all, she drew up a complete roster of names. Her approach was the same to all. "I'm not making any bones about this—I want you to help me get a husband. Do you have a suitable brother or uncle that I can meet?" She was forced to cross out 53 names because the polite response was "Sorry, my brothers and uncles are all married." Undaunted, she continued on her grim task. The eighty-seventh teacher responded laughingly, "Why, yes, I have an Uncle Joe. Why don't you come up Sunday? I'll invite him too." A diamond wedding band now glitters on her finger.

The next happy hunting ground is the vacation spots which men seek when they are tired, weak and consequently at their best for our purpose.

Many men, particularly of our great middle class, frequent adult camps. The atmosphere of a camp with its informality is conducive to quick romances which do not generally lead to matrimony. Man regards his vacation not only as a break from the responsibilities of his business routine but also as a means of fun without further or future entanglement. He wants a playmate who is willing to enter into this spirit of gaiety with him. Even though thoughts of marriage are furthest from his mind, the goal of matrimony must be ever present in your thoughts.

The main disadvantage of the adult camp is that females far outnumber the males, often as much as 10 to 1. This handicap can be overcome by avoiding these places on the most popular weekends.

Vacation time, be it a weekend or fortnight, is too short to be wasted. Make sure that your seating place in the dining room is a desirable one. If another table has more attractive male occupants, ask the head waiter to change your seat. It's yours for the asking if you don't let your timidity stop you.

Modern Court Jesters

MOST camps have a director of entertainment who is the modern version of the court jester. The recluse may find him the bane of her vacation period but you are there to partake of as many activities as possible. If you don't want to be an active participant, join the cheering squad. An admiring glance for the star of the tennis court or a spontaneous burst of applause for the outstanding player at the ping pong tournament will not go unnoticed by either of them. If you have any talent for singing or dancing, the master of ceremonies will be delighted to put you in the show. The rehearsal period will be a splendid time to make new friends.

Cruises are an excellent setting for romance. It is New Year's Eve every minute of the day and night because fun, laughter and "devil-may-care" are in everyone's heart. Time as we know it evaporates in the sea air and a ship-board romance of 24 hours can't be measured by ordinary standards.

Don't waste these advantages by going at the wrong time. If possible, your trip should be arranged out of season and on the less popular routes. Otherwise, the ships are crowded and women in the majority. Avoid placing yourself in that awkward and unrewarding position. Consult your booking agent because he's well informed as to accommodations and when and where eligible bachelors sail. He can also advise you of cruises which fit your purse and time limit.

After you've done everything possible to make this trip a success and the boat has left port, lose no time in consulting the deck steward for the best location for your chair. By best location, we don't mean a chair between two married couples. Kiddingly coax the deck steward into placing you between the two handsomest men on the boat. Immediately after, bludgeon the diningroom steward with a similar request. Introduce yourself to the hostess or cruise director. Tell her you are out for a good time and want to participate in all activities.

Now that you've prepared the groundwork for meeting men, you can lie back in your deck chair and let the parade pass before you. Don't be the girl who is obviously not taking her constitutional but who is conspicuously dashing around the deck with a grim "I'll-get-a-man" swing to her hips! All too soon tongues will be wagging and gossip will be running rampant. Save the shreds of your privacy as long as possible by exercising caution at the beginning. An aura of mystery, at this point, is very provocative.

Vacations are a wonderful period to meet and cultivate men because the whole day can be devoted to that end. But as vacations are usually of two weeks duration, the other 50 weeks of the year must also be utilized.

For Athletic Girls

FOR the athletic type of girl, all the sports which you enjoy for themselves can be a means for meeting men. Golf courses afford an excellent opportunity for catching the male in his own sand trap. Usually, at the first tee, the starter arranges foursomes. With luck, your foursome will include a man or two.

Above all, observe the etiquette of the game. The only time a man detests praise is when he's driving from the tee. It's not the moment to flatter him or to breathe audibly. If he had the low score on the last hole, let him have the honor and shoot first. After the first nine holes are played, you may be invited to lunch at the club house.

Even if your foursome was not so successful, console yourself with the pleasant day in the fresh air and the par you made on the short hole. Golf can be played eight months a year and if you don't succeed at first, try, try again. It is a way to meet men.

There are many tennis courts in every community. You don't have to be a champion to enjoy the sport. However, if you are a fairly good player, the pro or manager of the court will be glad to arrange a double set for you. As nature begins to take its toll, many men prefer doubles to singles.

Let your partner have the glory of making all the spectacular shots at the net. It will feed his ego, and he will admire your perspicacity and good judgment for allowing him to win the point. When the set is won, accept the invitation to quench your thirst with a coke. Solidify the gains you've made with gay conversation and a flippant "I hope we'll play again."

Beach Good Prospect

THE fair daughter of Neptune knows how easy and pleasant it is to meet men on the beach with its informality and holiday spirit. Swimming as a sport which can be enjoyed by the two sexes isn't confined to sand and packed lunches. That nylon swimming suit can even be used when the sun isn't shining. There are many hotels that have luxurious swimming pools at your disposal for a nominal fee.

Don't hibernate—the fish is in the water all year round—dive in and get him.

Well, you can't say that we don't try to get you to move those muscles of yours. If you won't dive into that pool, maybe you'll mount a horse. If you don't feel too attractive in your bathing suit, the elegance of the riding habit should give you the courage to brave the glances of new people. Take your lessons in groups. Like the tennis and golf course, the master will introduce you to the members of your class and off you'll go for a ride in the park.

Many of these classes take place after business hours. The whole world is open to you if you will only partake of it. Romances may just happen in the movies, but in real life, you must make them happen to YOU—not to your girl friend—to YOU.

Use Your Head

IF YOU are the type who has hidden your nose for years in a good book and it's through the intellect that you want to make your hero, use that developed cranium as a means for meeting new men. You are not alone in your pursuit of knowledge. Many men escape in literature, philosophy and the fine arts.

Right now, determine where your main interest lies. In your specialty you will be comfortable and more apt to shine. If you have the money, select one or more courses at a convenient university. Generally, the only requirement for adults at colleges is to be over 21. The lecture class can be stimulating and provocative because of the professor's point of view and group discussions. More important, these classes are frequented by interesting and mature men.

If you are the intellectual type but your budget cannot include expenditure for pursuits of the mind at colleges, don't let the lack of wherewithal stop you. There are many free lectures and symposiums given by your community. Everyday your newspapers list free courses which are dependent for success upon your attendance. As a taxpayer and a girl with a new campaign, it's your duty to go.

Card Playing a Point

THERE isn't any interest which can't be utilized. Card playing, be it a major or minor vice, is enjoyed by all types from the blue stocking to the 51 gauge variety. This accounts for the great popularity of bridge clubs. Despite the title, other games requiring less skill such as gin-rummy are played. If you are a good bridge player, the male fanatic will immediately swoon if you understand his psychic bidding and the rapport established over the bridge table will extend to other activities.

Scan the clubs listed on the woman's page of your newspaper and Sunday Magazine section. You will find items about walking clubs, get-togethers for photography fiends and places for stamp collectors to exchange their duplicates.

The more important factor in determining the selection of a new position should be its richness in opportunity for meeting men. Since the working day constitutes one third of the 24 hours, such a large portion must not be wasted in a world devoid of eligible men.

Unfortunately the employment agencies or the ads in the help wanted column never list "eligible men work here" along with salary and working conditions. However, the smart working gal thinks of this inducement when considering a job because it has more promise for her future than a social security card. Don't hesitate to look around for new fields if the present job is too limited in its social scope or too barren of eligible men.

Too great absorption in a job is the most insidious pitfall of all. When a job compensates for a meager social life, it is assuming unwarranted proportions. The girl who sublimates her energies, social life and talents into becoming an office wife pays a terrific price for her indispensability to the boss. By office wife, we don't mean a girl who is emotionally involved with her boss. We mean the girl who gets supreme satisfaction from the boss's boast that he can't do without her and she's one in a million. She's the girl who gets vicarious glory from her employer's achievements and the important people he knows. Each new success is a feather in her cap and his interests are so vital to her that she'll break a date at the last moment to take care of his demands.

Undoubtedly the office wife gets a good salary and prestige commensurate with the importance of her boss but at what cost! She gives her all for satisfaction gleaned from another person's life. No job should be that important to a girl. The years roll by and she's building no real world of her own. A girl with tried capabilities will have no difficulty in finding a new job but the changed attitude must come from within her. In the new job, she must avoid repeating this over-attachment to her work and apply those energies for her ultimate happiness—finding a man of her own.

Last but not least your House of Worship can be utilized as a means of meeting men. The church offers besides religious services, a well organized social program. The prejudice that the social program will be stuffy is unfounded. Modern religion has long understood that the guidance of young people cannot be done with a heavy hand. The advantages of partaking of their discussion groups of current social problems, choir singing and dancing are obvious. There can be no more respectable sponsor for people getting together than the church.

The opportunities for meeting men are limitless once you recognize they are everywhere. You must take advantage of every possible avenue of supply. The strawberries in the field, the blueberries on the bush, the clams in the sand, the fish in the sea will remain where they are unless you go out and pick them. The man you want to meet is no different.

In mapping out your campaign, use your home, your friends, your work, hobbies and interests to provide further opportunities to meet new men. Expose every facet of your personality! Let it sparkle on the golf course, the bridge club, the schoolroom and church. By the law of averages, one of these sparkles will act as a magnet to attract the right man.

The road to spinsterhood is paved with good intentions but the path leading to the altar is strewn with the flowers of effort.

One on the Aisle—

Burt Is the Peer Of Swashbucklers

By Richard L. Coe

BURT LANCASTER'S natural athletics make the Warner's "The Flame and the Arrow" the best thing of its razzle-dazzle kind in years.

The prime of Doug Fairbanks, sr., was a bit before my day, so I'll go into no comparisons there, but certainly Errol Flynn, good as he was in "Robin Hood," didn't have so natural and convincing an aptitude for swashbuckling derring-do as Burt.

When he floats through the air, it IS with the greatest of ease. He can clamber up a 50-foot pole and you know he's doing it, and he can leap a 12-foot wall without making you wonder who did it for him.

Fortunately, Waldo Salt's screen play is skin-tight for the star and Nick Cravat, Burt's one-time circus partner, who's very amusing as Burt's mute pal and strong-shouldered partner. They're fighting for the rights of the little people in Old Lombardy of the Twelfth Century, and their opponents are a suave duke, a judicious traitor and the wiles of a beautiful woman. What more can you want in a Technicolor! For the first time in years, too, Max Steiner's purple music fits the sort of thing that "The Flame and the Arrow" so brightly typifies.

By itself, the yarn is the same sort of humbug that you've had a lot of (most recently and pallidly in John Derek's "Rogues of Sherwood Forest"), but so much is happening and Director Jacques Tourneur has so successfully kept it boiling that you rejoice in the unvarnished villainy of the duke, whose niece he uses as a pawn against his emperor.

This niece, played by Virginia Mayo, also typifies the sort of picture "The Flame and the Arrow" frankly intends to be. She's straight out of a Twentieth Century senior class, looking, as all senior class heroines would enjoy looking, immaculate, chic, Hollywood.

The characters' names also give you the pitch. Dardo is the hero, Ulrich the villain, Piccolo the hero's pal and Allessandro the secondary villain.

For a few minutes you sometimes feel that the "for the people" angle may get out of hand, but before you know it, Burt is finding a graceful and strongman way to get down from a tree, he's aiming his arrow into exactly what he wants to hit, he's leaping over rooftops, he's swinging from a chandelier, he's whacking away with a sword, not in any elegant, courtly style, but in the rough swings of a man of the mountains. There's a spectacular finale to the razzle-dazzle, just as you expect there will be.

Considering that Burt got his authentic acrobatics from a rugged career in the circus, you marvel that it's taken himself as a producer to get a part like this; it all fits him better than the jailbirds and the tough guys which first brought him movie popularity. Why doesn't DeMille shoot the wad and buy some of the valuable Lancaster time for that circus picture he's casting?

The youngsters will love this one and the older set will find that, at last, Fairbanks and Flynn have met a guy who can take them both on.

"THE FLAME AND THE ARROW." Warner Brothers release produced by Harold Hecht and Frank Ross. Photographed in technicolor by Ernest Haller. Music by Max Steiner. Screen play by Waldo Salt. Directed by Jacques Tourneur. At the Warner.

ADEQUATE is a word that gives actors ulcers, which is regrettable since both ulcers are unpleasant and the very disease reveals they aren't hep to the meanings of the words they use so glibly . . . My ears tell me even Shavian players, who, above all, should appreciate the value of words, can be victims of adequatitis . . . It means: "suitable to the occasion, fully sufficient, equal in value" . . . Which is one way of saying right on the button, neither too much nor too little, as nice a term as you can use about people who are pretending to be other people . . . Actors are pretty bright about some things and they can even say long words persuasively, but the three-syllable adequate should be studied as carefully as Stanislavsky or Max Factor's creams.

JUDGING of Keith's 100-word criticisms of "The White Tower" is staggering to a close . . . For a reviewer, each one was interesting reading, for opinions, while largely in favor of the picture, varied sharply . . . Several revealed no patience with movies whatever and it's not going to keep them from getting some sort of prize, though I for one was rather amazed at some professorial spelling; the learned profs wouldn't last five minutes under a newspaper editor . . . The proofreading department's quite another thing, as I find to my astonishment some mornings . . . Anyway, the 100-word limit was demanding and that has been taken into consideration . . . Manager Hardie Meakin will have the final reutrns in a few days.

GLORIA DEHAVEN is playing her mother in "Three Little Words" at the Palace. . . . Mrs. Carter DeHaven was a popular singer of her day and Gloria's featured in the unusual assignment . . . Yes, it is Helen Kane's voice you hear in "I Wanna Be Loved by You," the boob-oop-a-doop lady's youth being incorporated by Debbie Reynolds . . . To answer one more question: Yes, Bert Kalmar is dead . . . The last act of the Kalmar-Ruby partnership was Bert's signing of the Metro contract for this picture on his hospital bed.

IN BRIEF: Margaret Truman and Jane Lingo will be in this afternoon's audience for the Maurice Evans matinee of "The Devil's Disciple" at Olney . . . The Olney cast sent Shaw a giant birthday card and sang "Happy Birthday, GBS," but at Ayot St. Lawrence, the ninety-fourth birthday brought forth this: "No birthday is to be mentioned in this house. All birthday cards will be thrown out on arrival" . . . He's just written a play in seven days, "The Lady She Would Not" . . . Current at Braddock Heights' Mountain Theater on Route 40 is Clare Boothe Luce's "Kiss the Boys Goodby" . . . "Gigi" is in its sixth and final week at the Plaza . . . The Fireside Theater's book of the month is William Inge's "Come Back, Little Sheba," wherein Shirley Booth scored the hit of her career . . . Paramount's Charlton Heston, first of the TV boys to be "discovered" (as if they'd been hiding under rocks!) for the flicks, will be here the eleventh ahead of "Dark City" . . . My favorite reader objects to my saying that "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes" wasn't as good as "The Golden Twenties" . . . I stand corrected, as always.

Bette Davis Wed to Actor For Her Fourth

Juarez, Mexico, July 28 (AP).—Film Star Bette Davis and Actor Gary Merrill were married today in a civil ceremony at the home of Attorney Jose Anador Y Trias in Juarez.

After the ceremony, Miss Davis smilingly refused to pose for pictures kissing her fourth husband.

"I came from New England and we simply don't do things like that in public in New England," she said.

She was dressed entirely in navy blue except for white gloves. Merrill wore a gabardine suit with a maroon tie.

The couple sped away in a convertible for their wedding trip to Cape Ann, Mass. Merrill is from New England, too. He said they would stay in New England "until our studios call us back."

Photographers and reporters were barred from the ceremony.

Miss Davis arrived in El Paso, Tex., just across the Rio Grande from Juarez, today. She and Merrill sat in an anteroom of the Juarez Registry Office this afternoon and fidgeted while necessary documents were prepared to prove they entered Mexico legally.

It was Miss Davis' fourth marriage. She obtained a Mexican divorce here July 3 from artist William Grant Sherry. She retained custody of their three-year-old daughter.

Merrill was divorced in Juarez First Civil Court today. He said Judge Eugenio Flores entered the decree by mutual consent. The California divorce does not become final for a year.

2 Firms, 12 Individuals Held Guilty of Contempt

Philadelphia, July 28 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today adjudged the Weirton Steel Co. and its parent, National Steel Corp., seven of their top officials and five officers of an independent labor union guilty of contempt of court.

The court held the two corporations and the 12 individuals had violated a Circuit Court decree of May 18, 1943 and ordered them to disestablish two company-dominated unions and "keep their hands off" the rights of the workers to join any union of their choice.

East May Get Mine-Draining Water Tunnel

By The Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines disclosed tentative plans yesterday for a 300-mile water tunnel system to drain more than 100 underground lakes in eastern Pennsylvania into the Atlantic Ocean.

Such a tunnel is estimated to cost one million dollars or more a mile.

Water from the pools has filled hundreds of abandoned mines and is hampering progress in many other mines throughout the Pennsylvania anthracite region, which is a key source of fuel for the East.

Simon H. Ash, chief of the bureau's safety division, said such a tunnel would drain off a stream of fresh, potable water larger than the Susquehanna River.

Ash said this water could be piped to provide a city such as Reading, Pa., with all the water it might ever need, or to supply heavily industrialized areas such as Baltimore, Philadelphia or New York City with great quantities of clean water.

He said the tunnel also would have a great hydroelectric potential after the anthracite fields are depleted.

Ash said that from the standpoint of distance, the tunnel could be built from the anthracite area to tidewater as far north as Perth Amboy, N. J., or as far south as the Havre de Grace, Md., area.

However, the bureau now believes that a route from Glen Lyon, Pa., and the Scranton, Scranton-Wilkes Barre areas, under the Hazleton, Pa., area and into the tidewater section of the Susquehanna River below Conowingo, Md., would provide the best drainage from the deepest pools.

Bureau engineers are sinking 15 test bores eight miles apart to determine the type of drilling that would be required.

Swap of Services By Western Union, AT&T Approved

By the United Press

A Government examiner yesterday approved a deal whereby the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. would take over Western Union's telegraph business and Western Union would assume A. T. & T.'s public telegraph activities.

The transaction would end competition between the two companies in the telephone and public telegraph business.

Under the proposal, which still must get final FCC approval, A. T. & T. would give Western Union $2,400,000 in addition to its public telegraph business. The Bell Telephone System, an A. T. & T. subsidiary, would acquire Western Union's phone business in 28 States. Western Union would get the public telegraph business of two A. T. & T. subsidiaries—Pacific Telephone & Telegraph and Bell Telephone of Nevada—in California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

The transaction would not affect A. T. & T.'s leasing of private wires for telegraph and teletype services.

May Train Crash In Alexandria Laid To Bad Weather

By The Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday blamed a May 18 train accident in Alexandria on an electrical storm which affected the automatic signal system.

Ninety persons were reported injured in the rear-end collision of passenger trains operated by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads. The southbound trains had left Washington two minutes apart during a heavy rain.

The commission said there was a momentary power failure in the automatic signal system, which immediately put all signals on a stop sign, as the R. F. & P. train was moving through Alexandria. The train stopped promptly and put out warning flares at its rear. The crew on the following C. & O. train said the storm made it impossible to see the warning lights until too late to avoid the collision.

115-Pound Wife Catches Husband In 3-Floor Fall

New York, July 28 (NYHT).—A frail Brooklyn housewife caught her husband as he fell from a third-floor window today. She suffered only bruises on her right hand, and he was not hurt at all.

When Alfredo Lazzeri, 42, weighing 125 pounds, fell out the window, Mrs. Rose Lazzeri, 38, weighing 115, was sweeping the concrete courtyard below.

A clothesline halfway down checked Lazzeri's fall and turned his body into a horizontal position. Mrs. Lazzeri caught him in her outstretched arms. Both fell to the pavement, but without force.

Ex-Arlington Couple Still 'Jeeping' Over Sea

Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 28 (U.P.)—Adventurer Ben Carlin and his wife, formerly of Arlington, Va., reported today they are safe and still chugging away in their amphibious jeep in an attempt to cross the Atlantic.

A ham radio operator on Sable Island, 200 miles east of here, got the first message received from the couple since Monday. The 38-year-old Australian and his wife said they hoped to sight the Azores in about three weeks.

Their approximate position was 150 miles east of Sable.

Postlude

Thomas Still Top Baritone

By Paul Hume

It was a great finale to the summer's symphony concerts last night at the Watergate.

John Charles Thomas was there to sing and narrate. Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony gave him perfect support and surrounding music.

Thomas, whose mother was in the large audience to hear her great son lauded, sang in wonderful voice. It is hard to believe how many years he has been a guide to the finest kind of singing in this country. His diction, his easy handling of that beautiful baritone of his and his whole manner mark him as a rare artist. We have no successor to him today anywhere in the country.

Hard to Amplify

Mitchell opened the evening with solid, and frequently touching, accounts of the preludes to Rienzi and Lohengrin, both by Wagner. This is hard music on amplification systems, but last night it sounded fine.

Georges Enesco's First Roumanian Rhapsody wound up the first half brilliantly.

The real moving work of the concert came next. Thomas read the lines Aaron Copland selected from the words of Abraham Lincoln, while the orchestra played Copland's music. Thomas' speaking voice is as rich and eloquent as his singing—as every good singer's is.

Typical Songs

Then, with Raymond McFeeters giving piano assistance, Thomas settled into a group of typical songs, with four encores. These were "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water," "Mighty Lak a Rose," a spiritual, and finally his tender landmark, "Home On the Range."

All this, after singing a Verdi aria, and Rossini's big Barber aria earlier, and yet the voice showed no strain, no tiring. What a great singer!

The usual Sesquicentennial medals were given out by Carter Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesqui Commission. Barron presented the medals to Thomas and to Mitchell whom he thanked for the entire series.

2600 See Performance Of 'Ordering of Moses'

Approximately 2600 persons witnessed a performance of R. Nathaniel Dett's "Ordering of Moses," arranged in operatic form by Mary Cardwell Dawson and presented by the nine-year-old National Negro Opera Co., in Griffith Stadium last night.

The production, which told the story of the liberation of the children of Israel, was marked by good voices handicapped by poor acoustics.

The action largely took place on a stage featured by lotus-capped Egyptian columns, though the open field was utilized for the flight of the Israelites and the swallowing up of Pharaoh and his army by the sea.

Among those in leading roles were: Jacques Ringler as Pharaoh, Joseph Lipscomb as Moses, Horace Wilson as the Voice of God, and Moses Beasley as Aaron. The Rev. A. Joseph Edwards was especially impressive as the narrator.

Washingtonians Reading More Non-Fiction Public Library Reports; Fantasy Popular, Too

The Public Library yesterday reported business better than ever in a statement on its services during the fiscal year ended June 30.

The library said the increase in circulation of nonfiction for adults was "dramatic." The only nonfiction field to show a leveling off was that of technical — not to be confused with scientific — books for home use.

Readers were showing less interest in books on automobile repairing, machine operation, radio and television than they displayed during and immediately following World War II, but books on merchandise ratings, house planning, gardening and all phases of homemaking continue in popularity.

The library said 56 percent of the adult books circulated during the fiscal year were nonfiction, and at the Central Library it was 73 percent. Circulation of adult fiction declined at both Central and the branches.

Concern over current events was reflected by readers' interest in books on international relations, and such topics as "The Cold War," "The Welfare State," and communism, the library said, mentioning such books as Louis P. Budenz' "Men Without Faces" and "The God That Failed," edited by Richard Crossman.

Interest in the American background inspired reading of such books as Commager's "American Mind," and interest in espionage and un-American activities in such volumes as De Toledano's "Seeds of Treason" and Weyl's "Treason."

Readers have also been seeking answers to such sociological problems as marriage, family relationships, delinquency and effects of television on children, through books, pamphlets and periodicals.

A greater interest in the stock market and securities has led to an increase in circulation of books about these subjects and of the various investment services which form a part of the library's Business Division.

Concern with "the good life" made popular such volumes as Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen's "Peace of Soul" and the late Rev. Peter Marshall's "Mr. Jones Meet the Master." The library also noted a "definite trend" toward reading in philosophy.

Local and national events also influenced readers' interests. The art division is still feeling the effect of the "Treasures from Vienna" exhibition at the National Gallery of Art, which ended last January 20, it was reported, and the District Sesquicentennial celebration has increased interest in pictures and books about Washington.

In the fiction field the "most pronounced trend" in reading was toward fantasy and science stories.

Noting that children's reading interest follow those of adults, with some lag, the library said that while boys and girls still liked fairy tales and cowboy tales, they also called for science fiction. Several branches noted, too, a perceptible revival of interest in stories of World War II.

Hollywood Defends TV Qualifications

By John Crosby

A COUPLE of weeks ago, I wrote an article for the Sunday drama section of the New York Herald Tribune, more or less commemorating Mayor O'Dwyer's proclamation of Television Week in this city. In that piece I tried, as best I could, to estimate New York's chances of holding its position as television capital of the Nation once Hollywood gets linked to the East by coaxial cable and microwave relays.

CROSBY

I also expressed the hope that television would not settle in Hollywood, as did the motion picture industry and all the radio comedians. This brought passionate protests from several of Hollywood's distinguished citizens, including Carroll Carroll, who has been at various times the writer for Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and virtually everyone else of importance in radio.

"You feel," he writes, "that the environment in which a TV show is produced contributes to its I.Q. From this you conclude there is a danger inherent in allowing Hollywood to become the TV capital of the country because Hollywood is only interested in entertaining people, not in making them think. New York, you say, should be the country's TV center because New York is better qualified to produce shows that make people think. . .

"I don't think there is any indication that anyone will ever turn to TV as a fountainhead of thought. Today people buy TV sets to bring cheap entertainment into their homes. They don't want cheap thought from TV any more than they wanted it from radio . . .

"We proved during what is now being called 'the last war' that the way radio could help people to think was not through high-flown, thoughtful and excellent documentaries which reached only those who didn't have to be reached, but through established entertainment channels. Entertainment, that's the stuff that holds the people."

A Divided Audience

FOR reasons of space, I've had to pick out only a couple of Mr. Carroll's arguments in his 1200-word letter, and I deliberately picked these because they illustrated a Hollywood fixation. You might call it the "entertainment, that's the stuff" fixation.

Entertainment, Mr. Carroll, is not the stuff that holds the people. The type of program which has an overwhelming lead in listenership over all others is news. And news, God knows, has been anything but entertaining in the last two decades.

The reason that news programs, apart from Walter Winchell's, don't break into the first 20 of the Neilsen ratings is simply because there are so many more news programs, many of them local, than there are Jack Bennys, and they divide the audience among them.

As for reaching the people during the war "through established entertainment channels," I think it's the other way around. Millions of people who had never paid much attention to radio, turned to the radio for news during the war, forgot to turn it off and gradually acquired a weakness for Bob Hope.

News, of course, is hardly an expression of thinking at its highest level, but it is certainly a greater stimulant to thought than Red Skelton. It is not accident, either, that all reputable and nationally known news programs emanate from New York and Washington and none from Hollywood.

From Many Founts

UNDERSTAND, Mr. Carroll, I never advocated New York as the television capital of the United States. I said that if there had to be a TV capital, New York was preferable to Hollywood because it was a many-sided city. Actually, as I said in the article, it would be better for the Nation if television programs emanated, not only from New York and Hollywood, but also from Chicago, Detroit, Des Moines, Duluth and Richmond.

Panic Is a City, as Well As a State

Mrs. A. C. Byers, jr., of Route 2, Falls Church, Va., visits her mother-in-law in Punxsutawney, Pa., occasionally and just outside that city has noted a signpost pointing the way to:

Desire
Paradise
Panic

These strange names lead to amusing headlines in local newspapers. Mrs. Byers forwards one which reads: "Marilyn McQuown and Clark Rhodes Married in Panic."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Cute, healthy white puppies, 8 weeks old." (Temple 5806.)

"Five dear little kittens, assorted colors." (Kenmore 3-6003.)

"Mother cat and three cute, affectionate 8-week-old kittens." (Vienna 443.)

"Affectionate 1-year-old mother cat, good mouser, expecting kittens in August." (Woodley 1196.)

MISCELLANY

"Capital Transit reminds me of a spoiled brat," writes Naomi S. Talley of 3611 S st. nw. "It begs for candy (higher fares) until Mama (PUC) gives it candy to shut it up—then it starts yowling for more candy" . . . Irv Day, jr., of 5912 Melvern dr., Bethesda, Md., just back from a trip to New York, reports that en route he saw several carloads of Army tanks. On one was scrawled the message: "Kilroy was here again" . . . 13-year-old Kathleen Moore picks a novel way to make the column. Instead of telling me about the little girl she saw sleeping in a supermarket, she described the scene to Cartoonist Coakley, like this:

At that price, they should do a brisk business in little girls . . . Mary Pauline Perry reports that a well-known local executive excused himself from a meeting the other afternoon with the explanation: "My mother-in-law is arriving on the 4 o'clock broom" . . . Mrs. Agnes D. Beaton of the Automotive Safety Foundation suggests that young bike riders and their parents might be interested in the booklet "Safety on Wheels," put out by the Camp Fire Girls. (The Girl Scouts are getting out a similar pamphlet) . . . Henry Spencer Merrick of the Westchester Apartments points out that if we used English-type right-hand drives on our taxis and chauffeur-driven cars, it would be easier for the driver to open the back door for his passengers without leaving his seat . . . 10-year-old Jean S. Thorne, 10-year-old Judy F. Levenberg and 12-year-old Peggy Ann Mayencourt of 429, 426 and 411 Hampton ct., Falls Church, Va., gave a carnival to raise funds for their favorite charities, and I am now in receipt of $1 plus one car token as Children's Hospital's share . . . Touching street scene, observed by Kathleen V. Powell of 6516 Ridge dr., Brookmont, Md.: A tough-guy Navy CPO sharing his only luncheon sandwich with a strayed baby bird, near the Navy Building on Constitution ave. . . . Mrs. T. O. Ferguson of 4313 N. 4th st., Arlington, Va., discovered that she was short $10 while paying for her order at the Buckingham Food Fair. The manager checked his register, and found that it balanced, so Mrs. Ferguson kissed her $10 goodbye. But the next day the manager brought her the missing sawbuck. The clerk had found it on the floor, under the counter . . . R. S. Betts asks: "Isn't it about time they resumed playing the National Anthem at Griffith Stadium?"

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Webb Taylor, 4713 Wells pkwy., Riverdale, Md.: Half of the copy for the District Line Club's book of reprints from this column went to the printer last week. Goodness knows when they'll find enough acceptable material to fill the rest of it.

Ruth S. Zeisler, 2737 Devonshire pl. nw.: This is a strange town in that respect—some folks have left for work at 7 a. m., while others haven't even rolled out of the hay yet. When Give-Away donors write, "Ask people to call after 7 o'clock," I always find myself wondering whether they don't want to be awakened before 7 a. m. or won't be home from work until 7 p. m.

SHAKE THOSE BONES, MR. BUS DRIVER

Sue Bartley, of the NBC press department, was on an L-7 bus the other day when it stopped at Connecticut ave. and Military rd. nw. for an old man.

"Are there any seats back there?" the passenger inquired before stepping aboard. The driver shook his head and replied:

"Not unless they've just started a crap game in the last couple of blocks."

Korea, Gauge of Peace Efforts

By Drew Pearson

The other day I suggested that President Truman, who is not exactly the persuasive leader Franklin Roosevelt was, needed a lot of support from the rest of us in the current crisis, which is a lot worse than most people have realized. One thing he needs is some help in making the country understand what the Korean war is all about.

Pearson

As my own contribution, I should like to set down a few reminiscences regarding other international efforts to stop war.

The Korean war is basically an international gamble aimed at heading off a greater war; and, while it may fail, you have to look back 25 years to understand what progress the world has made in the painfully difficult job of making men and nations work together to set up international machinery for peace.

As a young newspaperman in 1928, I went down to Havana with Calvin Coolidge, his Secretary of State, Frank B. Kellogg, and Charles Evans Hughes, all Republicans in good standing with the party. At Havana, they put forward to the Pan American nations a policy of keeping the peace by international arbitration.

This was not a revolutionary plan. When trouble occurred between nations, they proposed the common-sense idea of going to court. But when the treaty later got back to the United States Senate, the sparks flew. And some Republican isolationists called Coolidge, Hughes and Kellogg just as vitriolic names as McCarthy has called the State Department.

Consult on War Threat

Two years later, I accompanied a new Republican Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, to the London Naval Conference. There Stimson did his best to put across a consultative pact—again not a revolutionary proposal. It merely provided that, if war threatened, the United States would agree to "consult" with the other nations of the world regarding ways of stopping war. Stimson made absolutely no promises or commitments, beyond the promise that we would merely sit down and talk.

Compared with the United Nations of today, the Stimson proposal sounds almost juvenile. But when he proposed it privately at London in 1930—just 20 years ago—Herbert Hoover, then President of the United States, nearly had kittens. He was so agitated that he called a press conference and emphatically informed the world that "no consultative pact has been considered at any time during the course of the London Conference."

Simultaneously in London, Secretary Stimson, not knowing that rock-ribbed Republicans were scared stiff over even a tiny bit of international cooperation, was holding his own press conference stating exactly the opposite of his chief in the White House. A consultative pact, he said, was definitely under discussion.

In the end, Hoover showed who was boss. The consultative pact was killed and with it the entire naval treaty.

World War II Begins

One year later—1931—the Japanese invaded Manchuria and Secretary Stimson once again tried to secure international cooperation to head off what he knew to be the beginning of a world war. And in an effort to prod and encourage the League of Nations into a cooperative move to stop war, Stimson took the relatively mild step of ordering the United States Consul in Geneva to sit in on council sessions—only as an observer.

An immediate howl of protest went up from members of Stimson's own Republican Party. They were so vigorous, and his chief, Herbert Hoover, got so nervous, that the United States Consul was finally replaced by Charles G. Dawes, whom the GOP isolationists trusted.

Europe Cools

Even more important, however, was the negative reaction of European members of the League of Nations. The French press screamed that they did not want the United States butting into League affairs. The British Foreign Office, long in sympathy with Japan, deftly undercut Stimson's crackdowns on Tokyo. Mussolini, fearing his turn would be next, was distinctly cool to American cooperation.

And Jap diplomats, foreseeing the day when they would go on to further aggressions, took diabolical pleasure in ridiculing Stimson, and slowly breaking down the peace machinery of the world.

For months, the League debated. But instead of the 48-hour decision made by the United Nations in the Korean crisis, it took one solid year for the League to get a report from an international commission on the Manchurian incident.

By that time, it was too late. The Jap warlords were firmly entrenched. The seeds of World War II were well planted. And, most important of all, every other would-be aggressor realized that he could thumb his nose at international law, and the League would do nothing.

An age was dying; an age of international optimism, isolationism, and Harding normalcy. An age was dying and Henry L. Stimson struggled almost alone to give it renewed life.

Leaving a sickbed in the spring of 1932, he sailed for Paris determined to warn the statesmen of Europe that they were sealing their own doom. Renting a villa at Geneva, he called in the prime ministers of western Europe and argued that Japan's far-away aggression against China could be a greater threat to them than any menace in Europe.

But he failed.

Those were dark days in Stimson's Villa Besinge on Lake Geneva. His room looked out on an old garden sheltered by high trees, in which roosted flocks of birds. And sometimes, when he could not sleep and work dragged endlessly, Stimson stood at his window looking out upon the trees and the moon and the shadows they cast upon the garden, and remembered the World War I days when he was a colonel of artillery in France.

Out among the poplars he saw again that line of men from the fields, the factories, the sea, going forward; and the line of women, wounded men, exhausted men, going back. A panorama of his life lay before him then, the latter years having been given to rebuilding equity and understanding among the peoples of the world.

And he had failed.

The importance of Korea is that in exactly the same part of the world, a few miles from the spot where the Jap warlords invaded Manchuria, Russia, 20 years later, has launched her first move in World War III.

But this time, the newly formed peace machinery of the world functioned overnight. This time Republican Senators, previously isolationist, supported the United Nations. Perhaps it was because Taft, Knowland, and GOP colleagues had been shouting about Truman's failure in the Far East that caused them to reverse their previous isolation.

Whatever the reason, this time both the United Nations and the United States Senate acted in unison. That's why Korea may be a milestone in the path of a war-weary world toward a day when we can prevent wars altogether.
